All Redskin Players Deny Betting on Pro Football

Owner G. P. Marshall Calls Entire Squad, Coaches to Office For One Question

Twenty-four Redskin football players, comprising the entire squad with the exception of four members ill in bed, were summoned before President George P. Marshall yesterday afternoon and each denied ever betting on a Redskin game, on teams in the National Football League, or knowing of any teammates who bet on Redskin games.

All except Bob Masterson, Wilbur Wilkin and Andy Farkas, who were confined to their homes with heavy colds, and Wilbur Moore, in Doctors Hospital, were present, in addition to Coaches Dutch Bergman and Turk Edwards and General Manager Sid Carroll.

The group crowded into Marshall's private office in the Palace Laundry Building at 9th and H sts. nw., late yesterday. No mention of the stories published Wednesday morning concerning reports of gambling on the part of pro football players was made at the morning practice.

The $64 Question

Marshall shot the question point blank at the gathering in his office. "Have any of you bet on Redskin games, any other teams in our league or do you know of any player, official, stockholder or anybody connected with the club in any capacity who has?" he asked, and each player answered with a definite "no sir."

"The integrity of pro football is questioned," Marshall said, "this is very important to all of you. We must have the truth and any player who has been involved in gambling will be immediately fired from this team and barred from the league."

"This matter is not closed," Marshall said "and I will pay $5000 for proof of any gambling by members of this organization."

Coach Dutch Bergman had not discussed the matter with any of the players prior to the meeting in Marshall's office.

"I have not mentioned the word gambling to the team since the first squad meeting in San Diego last July," Bergman said, "as I have never thought it necessary. At the time I merely read the club constitution and by-laws which includes the gambling clause.

Story Branded Untrue

"As to the story I have been investigating the rumors of gambling on the part of the players, that is not true," Bergman said, "as the first I knew of the story was when a newspaperman called me at my home Wednesday night about 10 o'clock."

At yesterday morning's practice

Congress Studies Elk Hills Question

Congressional study of whether the Elk Hills, Calif., oil reserve should be acquired by Government condemnation or be operated by contract with private interests got under way yesterday.

The Navy disclosed that Attorney General Biddle had told Secretary of Navy Knox that a new proposed contract between the Navy and Standard Oil Co. of California "should not be executed" without more specific approval of Congress.

The contract was proposed to replace one previously set aside after Department of Justice criticism,

Fears for Our Democracy

'Right Wing' Revolt Alarming to Wilson

By Ben W. Gilbert

Warning the Nation's industrial leaders against listening to "dangerous men who preach disunity," Charles E. Wilson, executive vice chairman of the War Production Board, yesterday stated that he was "alarmed" by the possibility of a "right wing reaction" which could destroy American democracy.

Speaking before the forty-eighth annual meeting of the National Association of Manufacturers in New York City, the former president of the General Electric Corp.—an industrialist who turned bureaucrat to do a war job—said, "if we give way to passions and prejudices," and permit the approaching election year to break up our society "into partisan groups and cliques, we are playing into the hands of the enemy . . . jeopardizing our entire national future."

"I do not want to be an alarmist," Wilson said. "Perhaps I spend so much time in Washington where politics are always exaggerated, but I tell you frankly that I am deeply alarmed today over the possibility that a right wing reaction may draw some sections of capital so far away from our traditions as to imperil the entire structure of American life as we know it.

"This above all is a time when the industrial leaders of America owe it to their country and to themselves to exercise temperate judgment to practice the arts of compromise—to avoid the temptation of sacrificing enduring values for temporary gains—and to withhold encouragement from dangerous men who preach disunity."

He charged that some "special political and economic groups want to win complete victory for themselves regardless of the consequences for others and for the Nation."

"I know of no other period in American history, except perhaps the Civil War, when there has been so much need for unity in our country, and so few signs of it, as at the present time . . . Too many people are trying to position themselves for the postwar period."

He displayed charts outlining the production problems for 1944 and showing a need to increase muni-

190 Million Revenue Cut From Tax Bill

Senate Finance Committee Slices House Measure to Under 2 Billion

By Francis J. Kelly
Associated Press Staff Writer

Estimated yield from the new tax bill shriveled to less than two billion dollars yesterday when the Senate Finance Committee amputated 190 million dollars from the House total in a five-hour closed session.

The committee sliced away an anticipated 78 million dollars of revenue in an afternoon session after knocking out 112 million dollars worth of excise taxes before lunch. As a result, the bill which was estimated to raise $2,140,000,000 in the form in which it left the House was reduced to a total of about $1,950,000,000. Existing taxes bring about $41,300,000,000 a year into the Treasury.

Running counter to general forecasts, the committee approved 92 million dollars in increased postal rates, although knocking out a projected doubling of third-class rates which would have accounted for $74,400,000 more a year. Postmaster General Walker had asked the Senators to withhold action on the postal increases pending completion of a cost study within the department.

Local Mail Rate Goes Up

Under the committee action, which is still subject to Senate approval or rejection, the rate on local first-class mail would rise from 2 to 3 cents an ounce, air mail would go up from 6 to 8 cents, and postoffices would charge higher fees for money orders and registered, insured and COD mail.

The committee now has acted on a majority of the proposed excise-tax changes, granting downward revisions, as compared to House rates, in several cases.

Travelers, telephone users, whisky drinkers, clubmen, pool players, night club playboys and women buying furs, face powder and handbags are among those lassoed by the new levies, previously voted by the House but still subject to Senate approval.

Increases Approved

The following increases, provided in the House bill, were approved by the Senators without change:

Whisky, from $6 a proof gallon to $9.

Beer, from $7 a barrel to $8.

Toilet preparations, from 10 per cent of retail price to 25 per cent.

Telephone service—Local, from 10 to 15 per cent; long distance, from 20 to 25 per cent.

Domestic telegraph, radio and cable service, from 15 to 25 per cent.

Transportation of persons (including sleeping car charges) from 10 to 15 per cent.

Club dues and initiation fees, from 11 to 20 per cent.

Billiard and pool tables, from $10 per table annually to $20.

Reds Again Forced Back In Kiev Area

But Soviet Army Flanks Rail Point In Dnieper Bend Further South

London, Dec. 8 (AP).—Russian columns closing around Znamenka outflanked this Dnieper bend rail center from the south today by cutting the big rail line to Kikolaev, but the Red army fell back for the second straight day in the Kiev bulge before a mighty German counterattack powered by perhaps 1700 tanks.

The Znamenka-Nikolaev line was cut at Sharovka, 15 miles south of Znamenka, marking a 13-mile advance in 24 hours from Pantaevka. The district center of Novaya Praga was overrun en route.

North of the rail hub another Soviet column which had already cut the line to Smela, captured Elizavetgradka, 13 miles northwest of Znamenka. This town is only 5 miles from the subsidiary junction of Khirovka, astride the Germans' last rail escape route from Znamenka, a line running west of Kirovograd.

3 of 4 Rails Are Cut

Other Russian forces were only two miles from Znamenka itself, Moscow reports said, as three of the four railroads leading from the area were cut.

But the Russians were fighting a desperate battle north of this area in the Kiev bulge, where they admitted their second treat in two days and indicated that Chernyakhov, on the rail line between Zhitomir and Korosten, was either lost or outflanked.

Identifying the hottest arena in the battle area as "northeast of Chernyakhov," the Moscow communique said "our troops evacuated a number of populated places." The communique said 84 German tanks were wrecked in the battling in this sector in Wednesday's fighting alone.

The Soviet midnight communique said the Germans were attacking continuously in this area, throwing into the battle large forces of infantry and tanks, pressing the Russians back from some towns and hamlets at a cost of up to 2000 dead.

Reds Use Mobile Artillery

Chernyakhov, some 75 miles west of Kiev, is the westernmost Russian penetration. This bulge, which the Germans have been counterattacking for seven weeks, taking back the rail centers of Zhitomir and Korosten, was now under violent fire of a renewed drive by Gen. Fritz von Mannstein. The Russians, under Gen. Nikolai Vatutin, had moved in mobile artillery over miles of hub-deep mud roads to meet the horde of tanks.

Moscow dispatches said the Germans were using the largest group of big tanks ever employed on the Soviet front in their determined effort to liquidate this threat to the very heart of their Russian defenses. They were concentrated on a 40-mile battlefront between

5th Army Surges Past Seized Peaks in Italy

By Edward Kennedy

Algiers, Dec. 8 (AP).—American and British troops of the Fifth Army in Italy slashed down the western slopes of Mt. Maggiore and Mt. Camino into the strategic valley of the upper Garigliano River today after wresting the summits of those peaks from the Germans and capturing the strongly fortified villages of Camino, Acquapendola and Cocuruzza southwest of Mignano.

Though the steady, savage thrusts of Lieut. Gen. Mark W. Clark's fighters had cleared the Nazis from the last important heights in this sector of their powerful winter line, including bloody Monastery Ridge, the enemy still was resisting fiercely from many scattered strongpoints.

Latest reports placed British advance units in this sector within a mile and a half of the Garigliano after their seizure of Acquapendola, about seven miles south of the key German stronghold of Cassino guarding the broad highway to Rome.

From dominating positions on both Mount Maggiore and Mount Camino, Gen. Clark's guns now command the southern part of the all-important valley between Magnano and Cassino.

To the east Gen. Sir Bernard L. Montgomery's Eighth Army reported limited advances in the area of the Moro River, where the stream empties into the Adriatic.

Hard, stubborn fighting continued to rage around Orsogna, some 10 miles inland, and the German radio reported that Montgomery had launched a strong new asasult against enemy positions on the eastern slopes of the towering Maiella Mountains west of Casoli, approximately 15 miles from the Adriatic.

It was disclosed that the crack German Sixty-fifth Infantry Division had been so badly smashed by Montgomery's advance that Field Marshal Gen. Albert Kesselring had been forced to replace it in the front line with the Ninetieth Armored Grenadier Division. One battalion of the Sixty-fifth was said to have lost every officer.

Continued pouring rain as well as fierce enemy resistance made the Allied advance everywhere a

72 Nip Planes Shot Down In Assault On Marshalls

4 More Vessels Damaged as Carrier Task Forces Strike; U. S. Losses 'Light'

By John G. Norris

Two Japanese cruisers and four other ships were sunk and more than 72 enemy planes destroyed by American carrier task forces in violent sea-air fighting in the Marshall Islands Saturday, the Navy announced last night.

United States naval planes, it was reported, attacked four Nipponese bases in the Marshalls with deadly effect, knocking out shore installations, burning additional Jap bombers on the ground, and damaging four more enemy vessels.

Japanese air forces struck back, but our forces, it was said, "successfully fought off vigorous prolonged aerial and torpedo and bombing attacks."

One American ship suffered "minor damage," while our plane losses in the heavy sea-air battling were "light," the Navy said.

Pownall in Command

Rear Admiral Charles A. Pownall, former chief of the flight division in the Bureau of Aeronautics here and a veteran Navy flier, commanded the American task forces engaged.

The aerial blows at Japan's Marshall bases were aimed at two atolls—Kwajalein and Wotje—at the eastern and western ends of the mid-Pacific island group. Four island bases in the two atolls were heavily smashed.

At Kwajalein, the chief blow was dealt the Jap fleet. It was here that two enemy light cruisers, a tanker and three cargo transport ships were sunk and one troop transport and two cargo transports damaged. One cargo transport was damaged at Wotje.

The terse language of the official communique left no doubt that both attack and the enemy's response were furious and heavy. A total of 72 Nip planes were shot down, an undetermined number of enemy medium bombers were strafed and burned on the ground and ground installations on Kwajalein, Ebeye, Roi and Wotje Islands were "destroyed or damaged."

Ack Ack Gets 6 Japs

Antiaircraft gunners teamed with fighter planes to beat off the waves of Jap counterattacks, with notable results. Of one group of seven torpedo planes which attacked our carrier task forces, six were shot down by ack ack fire.

Weak retaliation raids were made on our newly won bases in the Gilbert Islands, 400 miles south of the Marshalls, it was also announced. A bulletin from Admiral Chester W. Nimitz, commander in chief of the United States Pacific Fleet, issued both here and in Hawaii, at the same time as the com-

13 Millions Reported Spent For One Plane

Burlington, N. C., Firm Had 63 Millions In U. S. Contracts

By the Associated Press

A special House Military Affairs Subcommittee heard from its investigator yesterday that more than 13 million dollars had been spent at the Fairchild Aircraft plant, Burlington, N. C., but only one plane had been produced since the plant received its first contract on October 31, 1941.

Witnesses said the plant was a four million dollar enterprise built and equipped by the Government and leased by the Defense Plant Corp. to Fairchild Engine and Airplane Corp. of Hagerstown, Md., under a dollar-a-year contract.

Wendell R. Blackburn, the committee agent, testified at the opening of a hearing that the Burlington plant had received three contracts totaling more than 63 million dollars, that 2350 workers had been employed, and that 475 gunnery training planes were ordered.

"General wastage, inefficiency and extravagance" accounted for production, in two years, of only one accepted plane and ten others at the assembly line stage, Blackburn declared.

If production schedules had been met, he asserted, 107 planes should have been turned out to date.

Blackburn cited examples of expenses piled up by the management in the two-year period, including office supplies, $91,206.29; traveling expenses, $52,365.25; maintenance of equipment, $12,529.15, and incidentals, $106,407.56.

The Fairchild management spent $249,303.84 on guard service, Blackburn said. They borrowed 50 skilled men from an East St. Louis firm to which they paid $48 a man per day for the men's services.

H. M. Chapman, former employe at the Burlington factory, said the Army's constant design changes, the management's supervisory failures, and labor's idling around soft drink vending machines were all factors in the failure to produce.

Reuther Talking

By Christine Sadler

A secret coalition between big food manufacturers and three organized farm groups in a campaign to lift the lid off food prices and "stick labor" with the blame for resulting inflationary increases was charged before the Senate Banking Committee yesterday by Walter P. Reuther, vice president of the United Automobile Workers.

Headed by General Foods Corp., he said, food manufacturers "making the greatest profits in their history"—formed the Food Industry War Committee and "propositioned the farm bloc to team up in the antisubsidy campaign."

An investigation by the Senate group, he declared, would show that Clarence Francis, chairman of the food industry committee, invited the American Farm Bureau Federation, the National Grange and the National Council of Farmers Cooperatives to a meeting in October, and proposed a union for higher prices.

"Gentlemen's Agreement"

Afraid to accept his proposition openly "because they knew farmers would not want them aligned with the big food processors," the farm groups entered into a "gentlemen's agreement" with Francis, Reuther charged, and the two line-ups have been conducting "parallel campaigns against the subsidy."

The first meeting of the groups was held on the same day farm bloc leaders met with the President to discuss the subsidy, Reuther said, intimating it smashed hopes of a compromise between the Administration and farm leaders that had existed earlier.

Halleck Heads GOP Drive; He Predicts Control of House

By Robert C. Albright

Organization of the House by Republicans in 1944 was predicted last night by Representative Charles A. Halleck of Indiana, who yesterday was elected unanimously to head the Republican congressional campaign committee.

Halleck was named to direct next year's GOP drive for House seats by the 32-man Republican congressional committee representing every State having Republican representation in Congress.

The 43-year-old Indiana Republican told newsmen he will call another meeting of the committee shortly to map a GOP program.

"The committee will conduct a strong, active, aggressive campaign throughout the country to elect a Republican House," he said.

"Every recent election points to a strong and continuing Republican surge and a Republican House in 1944 seems inevitable. We do not, however, intend to relax our efforts or yield to overconfidence."

Halleck said he expects still another special election next month—Pennsylvania's Second District election of a successor to Rep. James P. McGranery (Democrat) to bear out the Nation-wide nature of the recent Republican tide.

The youthful Hoosier Republican succeeds the late Representative J. William Ditter of Pennsylvania, killed in a recent airplane crash. Halleck paid tribute to Ditter's recent committee leadership and said he felt "very humble" in undertaking his new duties. All of his major decisions, he said, will be reached in close teamwork with the committee.

Halleck came to Congress in January, 1935, in a special election that broke a solid Indiana Democratic Congressional delegation. When he came to the Capitol, there were only 88 Republicans in the House. Today there are 208.

In past campaigns he has worked closely with Republican House Leader Joseph W. Martin, Jr., who supported him for the committee chairmanship. On good terms with many factions within the party, Halleck is expected to stress a "united front" theme.

It was Halleck who in 1940 nominated Wendell Willkie for the Republican presidential nomination, but he has made it plain that his attitude toward the 1944 presidential race is completely independent as to GOP candidates.

London Hears Turks Prepare In Dardanelles

Invasion Jitters Sweeping Nazis' Allies in Balkans

By Thomas C. Watson

London (Thursday), Dec. 9 (INS).—Turkey was reported in Cairo dispatches today to have intensified military preparations in a 6-mile deep zone of fortifications straddling the Dardanelles and there were signs that Germany's Balkan satellites, particularly Bulgaria, were seized with new jitters.

This nervousness was born apparently of the fear that the meeting of the American and Turkish Presidents and the British Prime Minister foreshadowed an early full-scale Allied invasion of southeastern Europe, aided in some fashion by Turkey.

Reports from the Turkish capital of Ankara, relayed to London papers from Cairo, said Turkey is mustering nine classes of reserves, comprising about one million troops, within one month to double her army.

Defenses Strengthened

The News-Chronicle's Cairo correspondent cited Ankara reports that Turkey has considerably increased military precautions, "particularly" in the Dardanelles area, where a belt of powerful fortifications 3 miles wide on each side of

Allies Suffer 16,800 Wounded, 5023 Killed in Italy

London, Dec. 9 (AP).—The British-American Allies have lost 5023 men killed and 16,800 wounded in the fighting in Italy, latest casualty figures showed tonight.

British casualties in Italy from the invasion on September 3 to November 23 were 3212 killed, 9709 wounded and 3153 missing, the war office announced.

Secretary Henry L. Stimson announced last week in Washington that American units of the Fifth Army had lost 1811 killed, 7091 wounded and 2670 missing in operations in Italy.

Navy Program Seeks 80,000 Landing Craft

25,000 Now Completed; Vessels to Be Used In Drive on Axis

The tremendous size of the coming offensives against Germany and Japan was graphically illustrated by a Navy announcement yesterday that its shipbuilding program involved a total of 80,000 landing craft of all types.

Some 25,000 of the vessels, ranging from 325-foot sea-going tank landing ships to special rubber invasion boats, have already been built, with the remainder on order or to be ordered under legislation now pending before Congress, Rear Adm. Edward L. Cochran, chief of the Navy Bureau of Ships, stated.

Admiral Cochran also revealed that production of "alligators"—amphibious troop-carrying tractors—will be stepped up as a result of lessons learned in the bloody conquest of the Gilbert Islands.

Craft Valuable at Tarawa

When the coral reefs surrounding Tarawa blocked ordinary landing barges from coming into the beach, the "LVT's," as the "alligators" are officially designated, rode right over the barriers and brought badly needed Marine reinforcements ashore.

"If we hadn't had the amphibious tractors," Admiral Cochran said, "it would have have been far worse. . . . Undoubtedly their construction will be stepped up."

The Navy shipbuilding chief also revealed that the construction program for destroyer escorts, which set production records in 1943 with an expected 300 such warships, is not finished.

Will Duplicate Feat

Despite the fact that the craft were designed particularly for the Battle of the Atlantic and the U-boat situation is less urgent than a year ago, nearly as many such vessels will be built next year because they "can perform exceedingly useful service in the Pacific," he stated.

Admiral Cochran said that the Navy is "exceedingly proud" of the work of private and public ship-

Cape Gloucester In New Britain Heavily Bombed

Southwest Pacific, Allied Headquarters (Thursday), Dec. 9 (AP).—A 195-ton bombing raid on Cape Gloucester, raising to approximately 1300 tons the weight of explosives to hit invasion-menaced western New Britain in two weeks, was reported by headquarters today along with ground successes on New Guinea and in the Solomons.

While Cape Gloucester's antiaircraft positions were being destroyed and supply dumps exploded by fighter-escorted Liberators and Mitchells, Australian soldiers, 80 miles to the southeast, extended by more than two miles along the Huon Peninsula of New Guinea the coastal holdings from which New Britain may be invaded.

On the west-central coast of Bougainville, where American forces hold a beachhead in the northern Solomons 260 miles southeast of the New Britain stronghold of Rabaul, invading troops have extended their perimeter on the northeast, occupying several bridges and high ground positions against light opposition.

Jury Asks 3 Months' Extension In Probe of Kelly Union Case

By Joseph Paull

The special District grand jury investigating the Larry Kelly union case urged Assistant United States Attorney John W. Fihelly yesterday to obtain an extension of their term for three more months.

The grand jury has been sitting since April. The case began as a probe of a liquor-tax matter at the El Patio Restaurant and has rapidly widened.

It is reported now to have reached the character of a search into the financial structure of the International Hod Carriers, Building and Common Labor Union, composed of 450,000 members and one of the Nation's most powerful labor organizations.

"I can't tell you what today's testimony was, but I can say that the grand jury is plenty interested," said Fihelly after the jury adjourned.

During the day, Dorothy Bond Kelly, wife of the fugitive labor leader, appeared before the jurymen in answer to a subpena. It

While Reporters Got Run-Around

Nazi Radio 'Scooped' Allies By 2 Hours on Turkish Parley

London, Dec. 8 (AP).—The German radio carried the news of the Roosevelt-Churchill-Inonu meeting about two hours before it was officially released last night, with Berlin noting a communique it said had been issued at Istanbul by the official Turkish news agency.

The story of the conference was released in Allied nations at 7:30 p. m. (E. W. T.).

Some two hours earlier the German radio broadcast a communique of the meeting, ascribing it to the Anatolian News Agency. This communique differed in some respects from the official bulletin released to American and British newspapers, but was roughly the same.

The weekly newspaper, The World's Press News published blistering accounts of what it described as the "gross mishandling of the biggest news story of the war" by the British Ministry of Information, as an aftermath of the press arrangements at the Cairo and Teheran conferences.

The paper, a trade journal, quoted a cable from Philip Jordon of the London News Chronicle saying the story "has ended in about as big a mess as did the building of the Tower of Babel."

Noel Monks of the London Daily Mail cabled that "prejudiced official eye-witnesses who rely on their jobs and for promotion on the goodwill of their masters, took the place of trained reporters at this series of the most important meetings in the history of mankind."

He said efforts to clear up the situation by forming a press committee headed by C. L. Sulzberger of the New York Times as president proved of no avail.

Finland Will Pay U. S. Debt Installment

Refuses Approval Of Oil Contract Till Congress Acts

By the Associated Press

Congressional study of whether the Elk Hills, Calif., oil reserve should be acquired by Government condemnation or operated by contract with private interests got underway yesterday.

The controversy started when the Justice Department rejected a proposed new contract between the Navy and Standard Oil Co. of California for operation of the reserve.

As the House Naval Affairs Committee began its study, the Navy issued a statement expressing belief that the proposed new contract eliminated "features of the prior contract which have been the subject of criticism."

It conserves, the Navy said, all of the Government's oil in the ground until Congress authorizes production and gives the Navy control over production "of a very large part" of Standard's oil.

"In contrast with condemnation," the Navy said, "the objectives are achieved without cost to the Government at present and unless expenditures are hereafter authorized by Congress."

The Navy disclosed that Attorney General Francis Biddle, a witness at a closed meeting of the House committee yesterday, had told Secretary of Navy Knox that the contract "should not be executed" without more specific approval of Congress.

He approved the contract, however, as "a carefully considered unit plan of operation, which now furnishes a concrete basis for congressional consideration."

Chairman Peterson (Democrat) of Florida of the House Public Lands Committee commented immediately that "the intent and purpose of present laws will have to be reversed" if the operating agreement is to win congressional support.

He added he was opposed to such action, because "the oil should be held for emergency use," and said he favored full acquisition of the property by the Government.

It was Peterson's committee which first considered the Elk Hills case, with Navy Secretary Knox acknowledging he had muffed early negotiations, and the Justice Department ruling the first Navy-Standard contract illegal because "it gave a private company interest in Government property (oil in the ground)."

Assistant Attorney General Norman M. Littell contended the contract went "beyond" provisions in the Harding Administration's Teapot Dome contracts, and President Roosevelt and Knox subsequently canceled the contract.

Chairman Vinson (Democrat) of the Naval Affairs Committee would not comment following the hearing simply announcing the committee would conduct hearings in January on legislation to be prepared by interested members. He did say, however, that the chief question would be "whether the Navy ought to condemn the reserve or enter into a new contract."

The items subject to higher taxes than at present, but below the House rates, were:

Furs—Increased from 10 to 20 per cent. (House voted 25 per cent.)

Electric light bulbs—Raised from 5 to 15 per cent. (House voted 25 per cent.)

Cabarets—From 5 to 20 per cent, contrasted with 30 per cent approved by House.

Luggage, wallets and ladies' handbags—15 per cent of retail price, in place of 25 per cent voted by the House. Luggage at present is subject to a 10 per cent manufacturers' excise tax, while handbags are untaxed.

The committee voted to raise the bowling tax from $10 an alley to $20. The House had approved a 20 per cent rate. The committee also retained the existing 10 per cent tax on international telegraph, radio and cable charges.

For Duration Only

All the increases will be canceled six months after the end of the war, it was provided by both the House and the Senate committee.

Following up the liquor tax increase, the committee approved a section levying corresponding floor taxes on liquor held in stock by dealers.

A few excise taxes remained to be acted upon, including increases ranging from 50 to 100 per cent above present rates on various types of wines; a proposed doubling of the admission tax, now one cent on each 10 cents of the admission charge; a projected 5 per cent tax on pari-mutuel betting at race tracks, and a House-approved boost in the jewelry tax from 10 to 20 per cent of the retail price.

Without acting on the jewelry rate, the committee rejected a House provision exempting silver flatware from the tax.

Changes voted by the House in individual and corporate income tax rates still are pending.

Lord Keyes Demands Occupation of Reich

London, Dec. 8 (AP).—Lord Keyes, an admiral of the fleet, said tonight the end of the war was near, without a shadow of doubt, and he called for a postwar separation of the German states by a great army of occupation.

Addressing a Luxembourg Society meeting, Lord Keyes said he hoped that this time the guilty would be punished.

the Korosten and Zhitomir highways leading into Kiev.

The Germans were aided by excellent east-west rail communications leading into the area from their deep rear while the Russians were at a communications disadvantage, but Moscow reports said the Germans have failed to make a break-through.

A Berlin radio report declared the Russians lost 8,000 dead and many prisoners to the counteroffensive.

Henry Cassidy, Associated Press reporter in Moscow said the Germans were rushing into battle each unit of reserves that arrived in the area "in small packages," this being described as a blunder which is costing them the chance of a "real decisive turn in the battle which leaving the Red army free to form its own big concentrations for what may be a knockout blow."

The Germans made much of an attack in the Crimea which had no confirmation from Russian or other Allied sources. They said a Rumanian cavalry division had wiped out a Russian bridgehead south of the town of Kerch. After three days fighting, taking about 2000 prisoners.

The Russians have claimed bridgeheads north and south of Kerch and the Germans, indicating the northern group was still there, said it had tried a relief attack but failed.

Lloyd, Veteran Senate Reporter, Falls Dead at 83

By the Associated Press

Daniel B. Lloyd, official reporter of debates in the United States Senate for 66 years, died of a heart ailment just outside the Senate chamber yesterday.

The Senate immediately paid a rare tribute to its most well-known employe by recessing in his honor after a number of members publicly expressed their regret over his passing.

Senator Tydings (Democrat), Maryland, made the official announcement of the death of the gentle, gray-haired Lloyd, who was 83. He observed that Lloyd "looked like a Senator" and he personally felt that he had lost "a valuable constituent and a fine friend."

Nonxious Odors Keep Police Busy

The grandfather of all smells descended on Northwest Washington last night about 11 p. m.

Police were frantic as scout cars "followed their noses" in an effort to locate it. Takoma Park police sniffed and shook their heads as they also received frantic calls.

Sniffers calling into The Post were a bit varied in their description of the olfactory offender. It was described as "burning onions," "carbon disulfide," "garbage" and "burning asafetida.' One distraught caller, feminine, said it smelled like dead rats, in a sort of concentrated form, and wondered if it was safe to go to sleep, if she could. She lived out in Brightwood.

yards and their thousands of subcontractors in setting new shipbuilding records in constructing DE's. Ordinarily, he said, the Navy would individually thank those involved, but as this is impossible he asked that the press convey the Navy's appreciation.

"The magnitude of this accomplishment, however," he added, "pales in comparison with the job which lies ahead in meeting the landing craft program. If we are to meet the objectives, the Navy will require even greater support."

Cochran disclosed that the "alligator" has proved "invaluable," not only in surmounting submerged coral reefs in the mid-Pacific but also in cutting a path across the shorelines of many tropical Pacific islands where there is no beach and the tangled jungles grow out over the water.

Some Carry Cargo Also

Some of the LVT's, he said, are designed to carry cargo as well as troops ashore from transports and up onto land. Others mount gun turrets and field howitzers to "cover" the landing with shellfire.

Admiral Cochran revealed that the 80,000 landing craft—some of which cost $3,500,000 each—will cost about six billions. About 20,000 of the landing barges and ships have been built to date, plus another 25,000 on order, and approximately 20,000 more for which authorization is now pending. In addition about 15,000 miscellaneous landing craft, including rubber boats and special types, are included in the over-all program. About one-third of these have been built.

WPB officials made known earlier this week that landing craft have been given top place in the entire war production program. Producers of steel plates and sheets for such craft have been asked for a record-breaking output during the next two months so that invasion plans for Germany and Japan can be rushed.

slow, desperate process. Every foot gained was a struggle.

The mountain village of Camino, taken after a sharp battle, is 3 miles southwest of Mignano. Acquapendola is 5 miles southwest of Mignano, and Cocuruzza one-half mile southwest of Acquapendola. Slowly but surely, Clark's troops were closing in on strategic Mignano, a village of some 2000, where the Via Casilina tunnels through the mountains into the valleys leading to Rome.

(An NBC broadcast from Algiers reported advance United States units were only 1½ miles from the Camino Plain, where tanks could be brought into the battle.)

The valley of the Garigliano and its tributaries, the Liri and Rapido Rivers, leads not only to Cassino in the north but to Pontecorvo to the west and thence into the valley of the River Sacco, which extends to within 25 miles of Rome.

The difficulties of the terrain and the determination of the Germans make it unlikely, however, that the Allies will be able to launch any great, general offensive that will sweep them into the Eternal City. Rather, it will require an unceasing series of steady punches. The enemy has shown a disposition to counterattack frequently and fiercely.

Gen. Broz Receiving Major British Help

War Sidelight

No Furloughs From Front, Patton Says

NEW YORK, Dec. 8 (AP).—Lieut. Gen. George S. Patton, Jr., says it is impossible to give fighting men at the war fronts furloughs for visits home at this time because "the shipping situation is so difficult that we cannot afford to run a shuttle train back and forth."

Patton's statement was contained in a letter written September 8 to Mrs. Lee Lipschitz of New York, who had asked that her husband, with the Seventh Army for about a year, be sent home on a furlough so she could see him.

After informing Mrs. Lipschitz that "I regret that, so far as I know, no furloughs for the moment are being given," Patton added:

"It is just as hard on me as it is on your husband. I, too, should like to go home but such a thing is quite impossible—as impossible, in fact, as it would be for you to come over here."

French Retire 2 Admirals

Algiers, Dec. 8 (INS).—The French Committee of National Liberation today forcibly retired two leading admirals who formerly supported the Vichy government of Marshall Henri Petain.

They are Rear Admiral Francois Michelier, who commanded French naval forces which fought the Allied landings at Casablanca, and Rear Admiral Robert Godefroy, who commanded the immobilized French fleet at Alexandria which for three years refused to join the Allies.

Both Michelier and Godefroy were prohibited by the committee from living in any important French port.

Naples Burns Gas Again

Naples, Dec. 8 (AP).—A million Neapolitans are again cooking with gas. After six weeks of work on the city's gas producing and distributing system, badly damaged by bombs and German demolitions, Army engineers have restored service, to the amazement of Italian engineers who had estimated the job would take six months.

Killed in Europe

Sioux City, Iowa, Dec. 8 (INS).—Former Representative Vincent F. Harrington of Sioux City, a major in the Army Air Corps, has been killed in the European war theater, friends learned tonight.

Harrington resigned two years ago to join the Army and was sent to England.

Yugoslav Partisans Are Doing Fighting, Commons Advised

London, Dec. 8 (AP).—The British government disclosed today that the greater part of the support it is giving to Yugoslav fighting forces is going to those of the Communist-supported Partisan leader, Gen. Josip Broz (Tito) rather than to those of Gen. Draja Mihailovic, minister of war in King Peter's exile government, on the ground that the Partisans are doing most of the fighting against the Germans.

Minister of State Richard K. Law told Commons that "our policy is to support all forces in Yugoslavia which are resisting the Germans."

Rommel Offensive

Tito announced in his communique today that Nazi Marshal Erwin Rommel had launched a big offensive against the Partisans, bringing up reinforcements from Greece, Albania and Austria, and had broken into the town of Prijepolje in northern Serbia in an attempt to smash across the Yugoslav's Lim River line.

The communique asserted that the Germans were aided in thns drive, launched apparently in anticipation of a major Allied move in the Balkans, by Bulgarian mercenaries and by Chetnik units of General Mihailovic—a repetition of the charge that the Chetniks were attacking the Partisans.

Further evidence of the growing Yugoslave disunity was a Zurich dispatch to the Stockholm newspaper Dagens Nyheter, written by a man who said he was a personal friend of Mihailovic, stating the Chetnik leader had publicly declared his intention to throw his forces against the Tito Partisans.

Attacks on Partisans

"We never attacked the Partisans except in cases when my people attacked them for plundering," General Mihailovic was quoted as saying, "but when these Partisans officially stand against King Peter, we see in them our enemies."

This was a reference to the Partisans having formed their own government in opposition to that serving under King Peter in Cairo.

This exile government has been recognized by the Allies, but there is some indication that Britain might now give recognition instead to the new Partisan regime.

Questioned on this point in Commons, Law said that he had no official information on the formation of a Tito-supported government in Yugoslavia, or on the relations between the new government and the Cairo regime.

"Our policy," he declared, "has always been to allow territories when they are liberated to choose their own form of government." He declined to amplify.

munique on the Marshalls fight, described the Gilbert attacks as "nuisance raids."

Four bombs were dropped on Makin Monday night, but they "landed harmlessly in the lagoon," it was said. On Sunday night, enemy planes dropped eight bombs near Betio Island airdrome on Tarawa atoll. Only one of the missiles landed anywhere near American installations, it was stated, "causing minor injuries to personnel."

At Pacific Fleet headquarters in Hawaii a spokesman said it was not yet known whether enemy warships had made any attempts at "surface interception."

"Apparently," he stated, "the Japanese ships were caught in the lagoon at Kwajalein.

"Our task forces were made up of more than one division of carriers."

Inasmuch as a carrier division consists of two or more flat-tops, it was clear that there were at least four and probably more aircraft carriers involved.

There was no indication as to whether the enemy transports were full or unloaded when attacked, but the loss of life at the four enemy bases and on the 10 Nip ships must have been heavy.

Dispatches from Pearl Harbor said that of the 72 enemy planes destroyed in the air, 64 were shot down by our fighter planes.

The Jap counterattack on our carrier task force, it was said, came Saturday night in bright moonlight, apparently as the American ships were heading homeward.

Nazi Shells Blast His Turret; D. C. Gunner Lives to Tell Story

A U. S. Flying Fortress Base in England (AP).—You could hardly believe that Sergt. John Erhardt of Washington, D. C., could still be alive to tell how two 20-millimeter shells from a German fighter plane ripped through his ball turret gun position during a recent Fortress raid on Bremen. But there he stood, sound as a dollar.

ERHARDT

Erhardt, whose parents live at 903 F st. ne., was on his sixteenth mission as member of the crew of the Fortress Nan D.

He had just shot down one enemy plane when the Nan D. was forced to drop out of formation because of hits in two of her four engines.

Attacked by Fighters

"Five or six fighters attacked us while we were out of formation," Erhardt related. "One came in off the side. He knocked out our No. 4 engine, hit a gas tank and put a big hole in the radio room. One of his shells hit my turret but didn't come through.

"Then one came inside the turret and exploded against the armor plate at the back of my seat. It knocked off my oxygen mask, put one of my guns out of commission, broke my sight and showered pieces of glass into my face and parts of my body.

"The thing that saved me was a pile of cartridge links lying on the floor beside me. They broke the force of the shell. If they hadn't, I surely would have lost a leg, or possibly my life."

Another shell from the same plane just missed hitting Erhardt's oxygen supply tank. He finally managed to replace his mask, whereupon he promptly shot down the attacker, his second Focke-Wulf 190 of the day.

Enemy Driven Away

Other enemy fighters swarmed in for the kill, Erhardt recalled, but at that moment the P-47 appeared and drove them off.

In spite of the heavy damage to his plane, the pilot, Lieut. Ted E. Jennings, West Newton, Mass., brought it back to base.

Native of Washington

Erhardt, 23, a native of Washington, is the son of Mr. and Mrs. John Erhardt. Holder of the Air Medal and four Oak Leaf Clusters, Erhardt has been in the service for about three years. After attending Eastern High School, he sold insurance in the District. His wife and infant daughter, Mary Lou, live in Coral Hills, Md.

House Passes Bill For Duty-Free Imported Feed

After a hot debate the House passed yesterday a measure to permit duty-free importation of livestock and poultry feed for a period of 90 days.

The bill was sent to the Senate on a rollcall vote of 257 to 55.

As passed, the list included corn, wheat, barley, rye, flax, cottonseed and hay, with the specific provision that the bars are let down temporarily for their use only for feed for livestock and poultry.

Representative Doughton (Democrat) of North Carolina, chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee, brought the legislation to the floor, saying it had been drafted because the farmers are "being called upon to increase production" of livestock.

From the dairy section of New York, Representative Reed, ranking Republican member of the committee, supported the measure.

Wilson Fears 'Right Wing' Reaction

tions production next year to 236 per cent of 1942 levels, compared to the 1943 output, estimated at 185 per cent of 1942.

Most startling 1944 job outlined by Wilson was in aircraft, which must produce 426 per cent of 1942 output, compared with 243 per cent this year. He cautioned, however, that many programs would be cut back while some continue to expand, but promised that cutbacks "will not substantially reduce our 1944 production below present levels."

"Next year we shall be saying to those responsible for aircraft production, 'Keep the pressure on; give us more.' At the same time we shall be saying to the shipbuilders, 'Keep your productive effort about at present levels,' and we shall be saying to the producers of equipment for the ground army, 'Cut down production.'"

Critical Years Ahead

He sprinkled in liberal doses of caution against thinking the war is almost over, warning:

"Too many Americans have been encouraged by recent events to settle back in their psychological rocking chairs, and brood about their personal problems. That is a dangerous frame of mind. . . . For the years immediately ahead promise to be years as critical and difficult as any we have known in our history."

His comments on the European phase of the war included:

"German war production, although sharply reduced as a result of the bombings, is being maintained at substantial levels by the use of slave labor. . . .

On the Japanese:

"The Japanese are tenacious, well equipped and better fortified than many optimists expected. . . . They hope to make a long war out of it—a war so costly to us in blood and wealth that we will grow tired of it and agree to a peace that will leave them in possession of most of their conquests."

Girdler Peace Program

Tom M. Girdler, chairman of the Consolidated-Vultee Aircraft Corp. and of Republic Steel Corp., told National Association of Manufacturers at the opening session of its three-day conference today that prime requisites of postwar prosperity were industrial peace and cooperation between industry and labor.

He named as keystones of industrial peace:

"Recognition of the principle of collective bargaining; recognition of the right of employes to join or not to join any labor organization; scrapping of the 'class-conflict' idea in labor management . . . and incentive for investment and work—a fair return for venture capital, and fair wages for employes."

Joseph B. Eastman, director of the Office of Defense Transportation, told the NAM's second war congress that insufficient tire and truck replacements to meet 1944 requirements might affect the Nation's transportation system.

Labor and industry leaders declared in a discussion of jobs after the war that an opportunity to work was the prime postwar goal.

Participating were William Green, president, American Federation of Labor; Frederick C. Crawford, president, Thompson Products Co. and of the NAM; Philip Murray, president, Congress of Industrial Organizations, and Paul G. Hoffman, president, Studebaker Corp. and chairman of the committee for economic development.

Turks Are Preparing for Conflict, London Hears

the strategic strait was said to have been strengthened.

Other Cairo reports said Germany was massing large forces on Lemnos Island near the Mediterranean entrance to the Dardanelles, as well as along Turkey's European frontiers in Bulgaria and Greece.

One such report said the Turks had rushed artillery and air reinforcements to the Dardanelles and Gallipoli areas and given sealed orders to their officers to be opened and executed in case of a "certain development."

A Stockholm dispatch cited messages from Ankara purporting to state that air-raid percautions have been tightened in all large Turkish cities, especially Istanbul.

All of these reports, however, were characterized in responsible British quarters as wholly unconfirmed and to be taken with the utmost reserve.

The most experienced London observers agreed that a Turkish declaration or act of war against Germany was not likely, unless Adolf Hitler precipitates it.

German broadcasts said Premier Sukru Saracoglu will deliver a speech this Sunday in which he may outline Turkey's current stand.

Speech Inconclusive

Competent quarters pointed out that a speech by any Turkish government official would not be likely to disclose details of the accord reached at Cairo. It could be expected to do no more than indicate Turkey's general attitude. Her future actions, it was felt, will not be revealed until they have taken place.

It was clear that the German-dominated Balkan countries were increasingly apprehensive.

The Stockholm paper Allehanda reported from Istanbul that the Bulgarian ministers to Moscow, Berlin and Ankara have been recalled to Sofia "to discuss how Bulgaria can break with the Axis."

Similar evidences of apprehensiveness were noted also from Hungary and Rumania which have recently resumed quarreling bitterly over disputed Transylvania.

Smuts Hails Conference

Cairo, Dec. 8 (AP).—Field Marshal Jan Christian Smuts, South African premier and a member of the British war cabinet, today called the three Allied meetings "the most significant conferences for 100 years," and asserted they achieved "unanimity far exceeding our expectations."

He expressed hope for victory by Christmas of next year, but warned that "very heavy work lies ahead of us, with fierce fighting."

General Smuts told some 70 war correspondents that the Allied meetings had averted the danger that the United States, Britain and Russia might win the war without achieving the absolute cooperation necessary for winning the peace.

Smuts, who had dinner with President Roosevelt here Monday night, urged newsmen not to pry into the secrets of the meetings.

"You are on a knife edge," Smuts said. "A word dropped on the wrong side might cause great harm. By your silence now, you are helping to victory."

Ankara Cheers Inonu

Ankara, Dec. 8 (AP).—President Ismet Inonu of Turkey arrived back in Ankara today from his Cairo talks with President Roosevelt and Prime Minister Churchill and was greeted by diplomats, National Assembly members and swarms of cheering citizens.

The conference was generally interpreted here as one of the final developments in a prelude to war.

A Turkish communique issued on the historic gathering made no mention of military personnel or military discussions at the meetings, but it was recalled here that Inonu himself is an army general. (It was emphasized officially in Cairo that no Turkish military men were present, aside from two aides de camp in mufti.)

Iranians Elated By Independence

Teheran, Iran, Dec. 8 (AP).—Elated by the declaration of Iranian Independence, made by the "big three" conference, many persons here are referring to Iran as "the only country which has already won the war."

Compromise Plan On Soldier Vote Studied in House

Possibility of a soldiers' vote compromise giving the States the option of accepting a Federal war ballot, in lieu of more complicated State absentee voting procedure, yesterday was being studied in the House.

The Senate last week ripped Federal balloting machinery from the Green-Lucas bill in a States' rights revolt, and passed a coalition substitute vesting all control over soldier voting in the States.

Pending a meeting of the House Elections Committee next week, Chairman Worley (Democrat) of Texas was sounding out sentiment on a compromise. Worley believes the States will be unable to revise their own absentee balloting restrictions in time to give a majority of eligible servicemen an opportunity to vote in the next Presidential elections. Worley's compromise is expected to retain provisions for a strictly bipartisan war ballots commission to print and clear Federal war ballots, with the armed services delivering and returning the ballots.

Saltz F Street has anticipated the gift wants of those who will make no compromise. You who are accustomed to giving only the finest may have experienced some difficulty in gift-shopping this year. Visit our establishment for a pleasant surprise. See how complete and how splendid our assortments are. From hose to hats, in every detail, we are prepared with gifts that conform to the very highest standards of good taste and fine quality for the gentleman.

Hold on, gentlemen. There'll be no string of gilded adjectives in this story. These suits need no such wordy build-up! Take Rochester needlework. Who could say anything more impressive? Particularly when so much of it is done by hand. Take America's finest woolens. Doesn't that paint the complete picture of distinctive good looks, and distinguished service? Take 81 different sizes and builds. Is there any better way of knowing you'll be perfectly fitted? Of course, you might like to draw comparisons with your more expensive custom-tailored suits. That's all right, too. One look in the mirror should prove that only your pocketbook will know the difference. Which may explain why so many men are switching to Bond Executive Group Suits. Now's a good time to join them.

Labor Relations Act Favored For Maryland at CIO Session

Cumberland, Md., Dec. 8 (AP).—A legislative program including a Maryland labor relations act, two-year terms for all legislators, a State nutrition agency and State purchase of toll bridges and ferries serving warworkers primarily was adopted today by the Maryland and District of Columbia Industrial Union Council.

The council also proposed several changes in the State unemployment compensation law, asking an increase in the benefit period to 26 weeks and a rise in benefits to two-thirds of the workers' regular earnings, plus "adequate additions" for dependents. The CIO also asked repeal of the so-called experience rating.

The program for the State declared in its preface that "most of the legislation necessary will require a special session of the Maryland General Assembly at the earliest possible date."

Among other things, the CIO decided to seek repeal of the declaration of intentions act in line with its previously announced policy, a statute permitting men and women in the armed forces to vote without obtaining absentee ballots, legislation prohibiting discrimination against Negroes and off-year elections for State legislators.

For the District of Columbia the council proposed a suffrage law and legislation to forbid discrimination against Negroes.

The council followed the lead of the national CIO today in urging abandonment of the "Little Steel" formula, and at the same time declared for "a firm taxation policy truly based upon ability to pay."

The seventh annual convention also placed itself on record once more in favor of labor unity in a "win the war" program and repudiated the Italian-American Labor Council in favor of the "free Italy American Labor Council," composed of members who objected to the original organization's policies.

Present Ulisse de Dominicis urged adoption of the "Little Steel" formula resolution and obtained unanimous approval. The policy prevents wage increases of more than 15 per cent above the level of January 1, 1941.

The resolution declared that wages have not kept pace with the increased cost of living and declared the CIO policy on the question was "a necessary step to set up a stabilized war economy which, together with vigorous price control, over-all rationing and a firm taxation policy truly based on ability to pay, will give the production soldiers of our Nation sufficient wages that will enable them to buy the necessary consumer products that are needed to maintain high production levels."

Results of the balloting for officers of the Maryland and District of Columbia Industrial Union Council were undetermined early tonight, but both President Ulisse de Dominicis and Secretary-Treasurer Sidney R. Katz were nominated amid boos and cheers.

A vociferous protest from members of Baltimore Local No. 43 of the International Union of Marine and Shipbuilding Workers against the reelection of the two officers brought an apology on the floor from Benjamin Gravy of Local 43. De Dominicis declared that the incident, which he "very much regretted," was to be considered closed.

Nick Voldick, leader of the protesting minority of Local 43, contested the apology from Gravy and the president ruled the apology out of order.

Nat Klein of the United Retail, Wholesale and Department Store Employes Association, Local 327, of Baltimore, was nominated to oppose Katz.

Joseph E. Craig, of the United Automobile Workers Local H-42 of Hagerstown was named to oppose de Dominicis.

Christmas Home Sharing Plan To Get Catholic Churches Aid

Parishioners of the Capital's churches will be urged to participate in the "Share Your Home at Christmas" project, it was announced last night by Donald F. Bautz, director of the Federation of Churches' Defense Commission.

Bautz stated that the Very Rev. Msgr. Lawrence J. Shehan, director of Washington Catholic Charities and pastor of St. Patrick's Church, had consented to issue a letter to Catholic churches, urging members to volunteer as Christmas dinner hosts and hostesses for lonely warworkers and servicewomen here.

Meanwhile, the working committee of the Defense Commission met yesterday and agreed to secure Catholic church volunteers to assist in checking applications of prospective guests and hostesses.

Harry Somerville, executive officer of the Civilian War Services, is planning to ask his committee workers to aid in securing names of prospective hostesses for the "share" plan, according to Bautz.

The "Share Your Home at Christmas" project is being sponsored for the second year by the Defense Commission, with the cooperation of The Washington Post and Government personnel and service agencies. More than 1000 warworkers and others had their Christmas Day brightened by last year's project.

Catholics Mark Feast Day

"Disregard for the principles of Christian wisdom" was blamed for the present war yesterday by Dr. Francis P. Cassidy, as Catholic churches observed the Feast of the Immaculate Conception.

Father Cassidy, dean of Catholic Sisters College, was ill, but his message was read at a pontifical high mass at the Shrine of the Immaculate Conception, Catholic University, principal scene of the feast day celebration. The Rev. Dr. Timothy J. O'Leary, instructor in the university's department of education, was the reader. The Most Rev. Michael J. Curley, Archbishop of Baltimore and Washington, was celebrant. The feast of the Immaculate Conception is the university's patronal feast.

"There is evidence all around us of the appalling tendency to substitute faith in man for faith in God," Father Cassidy's message declared. "Today the world is a veritable Babel. Never was there less regard for human life and more regard for the human; never were there more houses and fewer homes; never was peace more a misnomer; never was God less followed and the devil more championed.

"Let us petition the Blessed Mother that peace may soon be granted to the war-stricken nations of the earth. As the protectress of our own beloved land, let us pray that in the peace that is to come all Christian Americans may organize under her banner and set in motion a great wave of reform in moral training that shall surge through our American life."

Bill Would Eliminate Meat Rationing 60 Days

By the Associated Press

A 60-day holiday from meat rationing was proposed yesterday in a bill introduced by Representative Wilson (Republican) of Indiana. He said "thousands of pounds of meat are spoiling" and millions of pounds "on the hoof" are eating feed which should be saved for next year's livestock.

Lobby Jury Hears Comfort's Brother

George P. Comfort, of Des Moines, Iowa, law partner and brother of Frank J. Comfort, Democratic National Committeeman, appeared here yesterday to testify before the District Grand Jury in connection with a $48,000 lobbying fund raised by three airplane companies to secure an amendment to the tax laws of 1940.

Comfort is one of a succession of witnesses presented by the Justice Department after public disclosure of the fund during the hearings conducted by the House Naval Affairs Subcommittee concerning the Brewster Aeronautical Corp.

With him when he reached the grand jury room was his pretty secretary, also from Des Moines.

According to reports of the Securities and Exchange Commission utilized during the House committee's hearings, the Democratic National Committeeman received $30,000 for making a rush trip to Washington, to give his legal services in securing an amendment to the 1940 Revenue Act.

He made out a check for $7500 from that fund to his brother George, according to the SEC report.

The desired amendment was introduced within a day of the Iowa Democrat's arrival in Washington by former Senator Herring (Democrat) of Iowa and became law. Under the amendment Brewster and other companies receiving advance payments on foreign contracts were allowed to count part of such payments as capital, thus escaping part of the new excess profits tax the House had just written in the bill.

While the grand jury hears testimony of witnesses in the case, a large staff of Justice employes is busy searching bundles of records of various banks for further evidence.

Meanwhile the House Naval Affairs Subcommittee has been called into executive session today by Chairman Drewry (Democrat) of Virginia to consider a tentative report and recommendations concerning the Brewster Corp., under investigation for two months because of past production failures. Although there have been reports that the committee would recommend cancellation of the Navy's contract with Brewster, it is understood that continuance of the contract may be recommended if certain conditions are met.

Kelly Jury Asks Time Extension

Fihelly is to gather additional evidence.

"On the first day, we are going to bring in several high officers of the International, just in case they want to do any explaining. We will also subpena Faust Moreschi, son of International President Joseph V. Moreschi," Fihelly said.

Kelly's whereabouts are still unknown, although a bench warrant is out for his arrest. According to the rank and file of his union, he misappropriated $150,000. According to its officers, they can prove he took $20,000.

Dorothy Bond Kelly was recorded as co-owner with a man called Ike Weiner of the two taverns at the entrance to the Cedar Point military reservation. It was here that many of the 6000 laborers spent their time off the job.

Records indicate that the money for the purchase of the land and the buildings came from the treasury of Building Laborers Local 832 in La Plata, Md., and was presumably to be used for the construction of two crude green-wood barracks.

The barracks cost less than $1000 of the $15,000 taken from the local's treasury, according to Fihelly. The rest is said to have gone for construction of the two taverns, one for the whites and the other for Negroes.

Later the taverns were sold for $15,000, but the union treasury never saw any of this money, according to Fihelly. The barracks were leased out for a graduated rent rising to $425 a month, but later were taken over by the officers of the international.

It was learned that Joseph V. (Joe da Maroosh) Moreschi signs all of the larger labor contracts for the international. Concerning the international mother union, several courts have commented. One of them, said the action of Moreschi toward another local was "inspired by prejudice and malice."

The Supreme Court of New York State in one case said of Moreschi:

"His attitude on the stand was so arrogant as to lend credibility to items of tyrannical and oppressive conduct asserted by others and denied by himself."

In the same cases, the court found, "the drastic powers, the defendants (Moreschi and others) have assumed to exercise, the . . . seemingly undemocratic manner of conducting the international, the threatened destruction of Local 147 by means of seemingly arbitrary, capricious and questionable methods, the threatened seizure of local's records and funds without first establishing a clear right thereto—these and other circumstances make it necessary . . . to preserve the status quo until the merits of the differences can be tried."

Film Cites Siberian Bases as Undesirable

New York, Dec. 8 (AP).—The narrator in an official War Department film soon to be shown war plant workers suggests that use of Siberian bases would involve Russia in war with Japan and thus "endanger the plans of our own Army."

The narrative accompanying the film, devoted mainly to showing how strong Germany and Japan still are, says:

"Vladivostok lies at the end of a long supply line which is particularly vulnerable from Khabarovsk down.

"The Japanese army has 500,000 troops deployed along this supply route. If we or the Russians use these bases to bomb Japan, the bases would immediately be made useless and Russia would be involved in a two-front war.

"Russia is engaging the main Nazi strength and a two-front war for Russia would diminish the pressure on the worried Nazis and endanger the plans of our own Army."

The film, entitled "War Department Report," was produced by the department's Office of Strategic Services. A spokesman said it was designed to remove from the minds of war plant workers any ideas that the war was won—or even that the enemy was weakening.

Included in the 43-minute film are war-front scenes taken by the U. S. Army Signal Corps and propaganda shots captured from Germans and Japanese. Sandwiched between them are cartoons by which the War Department gives hitherto restricted information concerning enemy strength and Allied military problems.

Reuther said, the food industry this year will make a profit that exceeds that of any other year in its history by $3,900,000,000. Profits of General Foods Corp., he said, were last year 16.8 per cent more than for the four prewar years "after all taxes were paid" and would have been 113.7 per cent more but for the stiffer tax program.

He listed the salaries of four top executives of General Foods as ranging from $84,999 annually to $129,999 and declared, "There are the people who are fighting the wage earner, who has got less of an increase than they have."

Questioned by Senator Bankhead (Democrat) of Alabama on why organized labor has objected to a freeze of wages as a wartime inflation weapon, Reuther declared inequities would thus be frozen into the wage structure. He said the "Little Steel" formula had, in a measure, frozen these inequities in that "it has given least to those who need it most."

"Labor is not asking for general wage increases," he declared. "We are asking for stabilization and would like to see reestablished the relationship between wages and prices that existed on September 15, 1942. What the opponents of subsidies want is a hard ceiling on wages and a soft ceiling on prices. There is no way to have stabilization without the use of subsidies."

Reuther further accused Congress of not having supported a price-control system.

"Do you mean Congress or the Administration?" Bankhead asked.

"I mean Congress. You have not made the appropriations available, and the members have fought price-control as something thought up by the New Deal and representing a bad philosophy," he said.

The Farmers' Union, only organized farm group in favor of the subsidy, was represented at the hearing by Russell Smith legislative secretary, who declared each price increase of 1 per cent on consumer goods results in a 89-million-dollar increase in the family bills of farmers.

"Not enough attention has been given to the cost of price increases to farmers. They as a group spend 43 per cent of their income on consumer goods and will be hurt by any increase in prices on those items," he said.

Senator O'Mahoney (Democrat) of Wyoming, concurring with War Mobilizer James F. Byrnes that the primary issue before Americans "is whether we are going to keep down the cost of living," declared yesterday the "dangerously inflationary" position in which the country finds itself is due to "our failure to adopt an all-out price-control measure at the beginning of the war."

"We ought to do it now," he told the Senate," and make it cover wages and all other living costs as Bernard Baruch suggested at first."

Albert Goss, master of the National Grange, took sharp issue with Byrnes and termed his speech Tuesday night "scare talk."

"It is utterly ridiculous," he said," to contend that it is necessary to cut consumer food bills less than 3 cents per day by use of subsidies in order to stop demands for wage increases of from 5 to 20 cents per hour."

Housewives to Air Subsidy Views Today

"Kitchen Day" on Capitol Hill today will bring out hundred of women who have to buy and cook the food after Congress has legislated prices for it, Representative Scanlon (Democrat) of Pennsylvania, chairman of the Congressional Committee for the Protection of the Consumer, promised last night.

After hearing a group of speakers that includes Dorothy Thompson, James Patton of the Farmers Union and Walter Lippmann, the housewives will storm the Senate Banking Committee with pleas for continuance of food subsidies.

Film on FBI Work Will Entertain Jr. Police Corps

Several hundred boys of the Junior Police Corps, the club of former gang members organized several months ago by Patrolman Oliver A. Cowan to combat juvenile delinquency, will be entertained by the FBI tomorrow night.

A film, "Men of the FBI," will be shown the corps members in the auditorium of Banneker Junior High School, Euclid ave. and 9th st. nw., and an FBI agent will give a talk on the work of his agency to reduce crime among youngsters throughout the country.

The current paper and tin-can salvage drives are being supported by the corps in regular door-to-door collections.

Nine Schools Raise $150,00 in Bond Drive

Exceeding their goals in every instance, 9 of the 11 senior schools in the District reported yesterday they had raised $150,000 during the "triple threat stamp and bond drive" to secure funds for the purchase of war materials for the armed forces.

Only the Dunbar and Anacostia senior high schools had not sent in their reports.

The drive, so named because it is planned to purchase jeeps, planes, life rafts and other material for the Army, Navy and Air Forces, ended Tuesday. Reports from the vocational, elementary and junior high schools were expected to be completed some time today.

One of the heroes of the drive was Kenneth Choon Lee, a 17-year-old Chinese student in the junior class at McKinley. Officials of the school said that last week they became worried when the drive did not appear to be progressing as rapidly as it should.

Lee apparently heard about the deficiency, because several days before the drive closed he appeared with $956 which he had collected among his Chinese friends. He explained to school officials that it was also to China's benefit that the drive be a complete success.

Various means were resorted to in raising the funds, among them contests, school plays, athletic events and talent shows.

High scorer among the nine schools was Roosevelt which raised $85,350. Western was next with $15,767. Other amounts raised were as follows:

Coolidge, $8689; Central, $3500; Eastern, $11,563; McKinley, $7451; Woodrow Wilson, $10,500; Armstrong, $5767, and Cardozo, $13.

499 Cases of Whisky Stolen from Md. Truck

Baltimore, Dec. 8 (AP).—The Federal Bureau of Investigation reported today the theft of 499 cases of rye whisky and the finding of an empty truck on which it had been loaded.

The liquor, valued at more than $20,000, was loaded on the truck Monday and was scheduled to reach New York City yesterday, the FBI said. An investigation was begun when the shipment failed to arrive.

The driver was missing and was being sought for questioning, the FBI added.

2 Firms to Stop Manufacture Of Army Rifles

Syracuse, N. Y., Dec. 8 (AP).—L. C. Smith & Corona Co., which has been producing the MI 903-A3 Army rifle, is going back to typewriter production.

Col. Frank J. Atwood, chief of the Rochester ordnance district, announced today termination of manufacture of the rifle, a modification of the Army's "Springfield," five-shot, hand-operated bolt action rifle, at the Syracuse plant and at the Remington Arms Co. Factory at Ilion.

Atwood explained that "volume of production of the Army's M-I (Garand) rifle and the, Carbine both semiautomatic weapons of firepower far superior to the "Springfield," is now so great there no longer exists a need for MI 903-A3 production."

L. C. Smith, president Hurlbut W. Smith said, "our workers are already being transferred from the manuacture of rifles to that of typewriters so urgently needed by the armed forces."

Powder Plant to Close

Belvidere, N. J., Dec. 8 (AP).—The Hercules Powder Co. announced today it would close its big Belvidere plant because the British government no longer needs the smokeless powder being made here.

Announcement of the Belvidere closing came 24 hours after the company had announced it would close its Parlin smokeless powder plant, employing about 400, for the same reason.

Guffey Reported To Be Replaced As Campaign Head

By the Associated Press

Senator Guffey ((Democrat) of Pennsylvania probably will be replaced next week as chairman of the Democratic Senatorial Campaign Committee with a colleague Administration leaders hope will be able to placate rebelling Southerners.

Guffey's resignation has been offered, it was learned last night, and if Administration lieutenants are able to persuade either to serve in the post, Senator O'Mahoney (Democrat) of Wyoming or Senator Hatch (Democrat) of New Mexico may be selected as a successor.

Guffey's charge last week that some of the Southerners had joined with Republicans in an "unholy alliance" to defeat the Administration's servicemen's vote bill prompted a demand in the Senate Tuesday by Senator Byrd (Democrat) of Virginia and Senator Bailey (Democrat) of North Carolina that the Pennsylvanian resign the campaign committee chairmanship.

Clatterbuck Obtains Reprieve on Eve of Execution

Execution tomorrow of Thomas W. Clatterbuck, the 33-year-old Leesburg, Va., quarry worker who was sentenced to death after confessing to the murders of five persons, was postponed yesterday until February 4 by the Loudoun County Circuit Court.

The suspension was granted to give the condemned man an opportunity to apply to the State Court of Appeals for a writ of error. Notice of the order was forwarded to the office of the secretary of the Commonwealth as well as to the State penitentiary.

Clatterbuck was convicted September 18 of the murder of William Russell, a tenant on the farm of A. Morris Love, near Purcellville, Va., by a jury which deliberated only 10 minutes.

At his trial a confession, purportedly made by Clatterbuck, was introduced in which he admitted the slaying of Love, his wife, their son James, Russell and Mrs. Russell.

Police charged that Love was killed on June 1 when he demanded payment of an old debt, and that the other murders followed when Clatterbuck feared detection.

Chinese Retake Tehshan, Near Lost Changteh

Chungking (Thursday), Dec. 9 (AP).—Chinese troops have recaptured the town of Tehshan, a few miles south of fallen Changteh, gateway to Changsha and China's "rice bowl," the Chinese high command reported today.

The town is a strategically important point on the highway linking Changteh, captured December 3 by the Japanese, and Chnagsha.

Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek's headquarters said heavy fighting was still progressing north and east of Changteh as the Chinese battled to ward off a drive on Changsha.

The capture of Changteh forecast a Japanese drive on Changsha, capital of Hunan Province, after three previous unsuccessful attempts. Changteh's capture also cut the vital Hunan-Szechwan supply line, to deprive the Chinese forces o. one of their main sources of supply. Its fall was a severe economic and military blow to the Chinese.

The communique said Teshan had been taken by plane-supported Japanese forces December 6, but the Chinese, receiving reinforcements, immediately counter-attacked and recaptured the city Wednesday afternoon "after furious fighting."

"Enemy remnants around the city are being rounded up," the high command added.

Chinese troops in southern Honan Province, meanwhile, were reported in yesterday's communique to have broken into the important Japanese base of Sinyang, and to have entered the suburbs of the enemy stronghold of Suihsien to the southeast in Hupeh Province.

Sinyang is 100 miles northeast of Hankow, central Chinese metropolis on the Yangtze River.

This communique added that a Japanese attack near Kingshan, 60 miles south of Suihsien and 70 miles northwest of Hankow, had been repulsed.

Allies Taking Big Toll of Jap Cargo Craft

Southwest Pacific, Allied Headquarters (Thursday), Dec. 9 (AP).—Japanese merchant shipping in the Southwest Pacific area, hard hit by the relentless pounding of Allied warplanes over a period of months, is becoming almost as scarce as Nipponese aircraft in the Allied dominated skies.

Indications of a growing shortage of these vessels that must transport the vital supplies and reinforcements to the enemy's far-flung island defenses are to be found in headquarters communiques. Recently they have reported fewer and fewer of these ships sunk or damaged although Allied air operations have kept up the tempo of the attack.

A headquarters spokesman reporting on both naval and merchant shipping at Rabaul, said aerial reconnaissance disclosed that merchant shipping at that once pivotal base averaged but 100,000 tons. That probably would mean that less than 20 ships were in the harbor at any one time.

In strong contrast was the concentration of more than 125 ships at Rabaul when Allied warplanes made their first great surprise raid there last October 12. They ranged from barges and coastal craft to cargo carriers and warships of various types.

A tabulation of reports made by Gen. Douglas MacArthur showed nine coastal vessels were sunk in October, largely by aerial operations. Sixty-three cargo ships, two transports and three coastal craft were damaged. Several hundred barges, luggers or other small boats were sunk or damaged.

Nazis Claim 7 Ships

London, Dec. 8 (AP).—Nazi U-boats sank seven heavily laden merchantmen totaling 48,000 tons in attacks on shipping in the Atlantic and the Mediterranean, the German communique broadcast by the Berlin radio said today. The period in which the alleged sinkings occurred was not specified.

How General, Told to Get Busy, HelpedBeat Nazi Tanks

By Kenneth L. Dixon

With the AEF in Italy, Dec. 1 (Delayed) (AP).—Sergt. Thomas J. Ahr of Minneapolis and Sergt. Ronald Fraster of Algonna, Ind., will always remember Salerno, once for the tough fight they had there and once for the one-star general they grabbed to help out when they were engaged in a point blank battle between their 105 mm. cannon and two German tanks.

So will Private Stanley Galus of Buffalo, N. Y., who is alleged to have been the guy who told the brigadier general to "get busy or get out of the way."

The general got busy.

The way the boys told it the other day, they had lost two men out of their field artillery crew when the two Tiger tanks showed up down the road. The whole setup was touch and go, because the division's command post was just behind them. They had to stop the tanks. They were firing furiously, but their impromptu setup was letting the tail of the gun slide back into the muddy ditch after each shot when a stranger appeared in their midst.

When two Tiger tanks are looking down your throat you do not take time to inspect the nearby brass, so the B. G. got orders to get busy. He helped move the tail back up after each shot. They knocked out the two tanks with some near impossible shooting, one at 200 yards and one at 1750.

"Nice work, boys" said the General and departed. The cornered guys in the command post stood at spontaneous salute as the gun crew moved on down the road.

Terminal Guard Shoots, Kills Man On Railroad Track

Norman Elmore, Negro, 25, said to be a railroad worker from Baltimore, was shot and killed yesterday by C. R. Burke, a guard for the Washington Terminal Co., when the man started a scuffle after he had been ordered from the tracks at New Jersey ave. and D st. se.

According to police from No. 5 Precinct, who responded to the call, the Negro was walking down the tracks in company with another man, as yet also unidentified, when he was ordered off by Burke.

The fight followed the Negro's refusal to heed the order. Police said that Burke fire the shot which killed the man when the latter attempted to wrest his gun away.

Burke and the second Negro were questioned at No. 5 Precinct following the shooting.

No Board Action in Kronheim Case

Thomas E. Lodge, chairman of the Alcoholic Beverage Control Board, said the board had as yet received no report from the Office of Price Administration on the Milton S. Kronheim & Son case of overcharging and therefore had no comment to make.

Mr. Lodge said he had seen only newspaper reports of the case in which Washington's largest liquor dealer admitted charging $76,802 over the legal price ceiling and for which he paid the OPA $200,000, nearly the required triple indemnity, on Tuesday.

"We are willing to cooperate in this and other classes of cases with OPA," Mr. Lodge said. He referred to food ceiling price cases, liquor ceiling price cases and tax stamps cases, none of which the ABC has taken action on yet.

The ABC Board is delegated by law to supervise licensed places; to deny applications for licenses; to maintain records of applications of all sorts, of licenses and of hearings; to reissue licenses annually; to fingerprint employes who handle liquor; to hold hearings to show cause why licenses should not be revoked or suspended, and to hold investigations and conferences on inquiries and complaints.

Its staff consists of 14; 3 board members, 3 inspectors, 3 stenographers, 3 clerks and 2 secretaries. At the present time one stenographic vacancy exists.

This staff handles the problems of about 1850 wholesale and retail licensed places and about 200 licensed salesmen.

Tojo Warns Empire Faces Doom

New York, Dec. 8 (INS).—Japanese Premier Hideki Tojo, speaking today at a celebration of the second anniversary of the attack on Pearl Harbor, warned his countrymen that the fate of the Japanese Empire hangs on the outcome of the war.

Tojo admitted that the Japanese have suffered many hardships since the war began, but said only a determined effort on the home front would enable Japan to win.

Meanwhile, the Tokyo radio, in other broadcasts marking the second anniversary of Pearl Harbor, adopted a grim tone. One domestic broadcast quoted former Premier Noboyuki Abe, now president of the Imperial Rule Assistance Association, as saying two days ago "there is no room for optimism."

Nineteen forty-four, according to Tojo, will be the year for Japan to win the war. On a previous occasion, it was recalled, he said:

"Nineteen forty-three is the year in which the World War must be decided."

Ways and Means Rejects Plan for U.S.-Paid Bond Ads

By the Associated Press

The House Ways and Means Committee, apparently siding with the Treasury's views, turned thumbs down yesterday on the idea of Government-paid newspaper advertising to stimulate war bond sales.

By a vote of 11 to 10, the committee tabled legislation which called for outlays of up to 30 million dollars for such advertising.

The Senate had voted to provide 15 million dollars for the purpose despite the Treasury's assertion that the present cooperative plan was working well and that the space newspapers now accord voluntarily would cost a minimum of 100 million dollars a year.

The procedure followed by the committee in tabling two House bills and the Senate measure precluded their further consideration by that body, although Chairman Doughton (Democrat) of North Carolina explained that the subject matter could be reopened if a new bill were introduced.

Rehabilitation Group Warned of War Booms

Austin H. MacCormick, executive director of the Osborne Association of New York told the thirteenth session of the Washington Bureau of Rehabilitation yesterday at its meeting in the YWCA, 17th and K sts nw., that war plant booms can create as much havoc in American community structure as a block buster bomb from the skies.

He warned his hearers, 150 or more of various social agencies and penal institutions executies, parole officers and several judges of District courts that they must now plan for constructive work opportunities for adolescents and young adults to take the place of their jobs when the war plants close.

Expects Crime Increase

He added to the magnitude of the impending problem when he said, "This country can prepare itself now for a major increase in all types of crime immediately following the demobilization of our troops. You cannot train men to be rough and tough and kill and have them return to the ordinary pursuits of civilian life merely because they have been demobilized."

As a possible solution he suggested establishment of camps similar to the CCC. "But," he said, "they must not be confined to cutting down trees. There should be wide opportunity for individual expression."

The problem of curbing the war stimulated recklessness of youth would have "been almost beyond solution," the speaker said, "but for the five-day cure of veneral diseases and the curtailment in the use of pleasure automobiles."

Prison Morale High

He warned that total reliance in the old trilogy of home, church and school would not be sufficient for the heavy task ahead.

MacCormick said that populations of penal institutions, both Federal and State, is decreasing.

"Not only is the population falling off but the prisoners themselves are now employed at continuous and constructive work and the morale of the prisoners of today is higher due to this one single factor, than at any time in the history of our penal institutions."

G. Howland Shaw, assistant Secretary of State and president of the Bureau of Rehabilitation, presided at yesterday's meeting and reports of work done the past year were given by Joseph E. Dayton, director. Harold E. Hegstrom gave the treasurer's report.

'Tommy' Elliott Retires After 33 Years 'U. S. Service

T. C. (Tommy) Elliott of 4402 Fessenden st. nw., closed 33 years of Government service this week when he retired as principal auditor in the audit division of the General Accounting Office.

Elliott, a native of Tennessee, was appointed a clerk in the Navy Yard, New York, in November, 1900, and five years later transferred to the office of the auditor for the Navy in the Treasury Department, where he remained until 1920. Specializing in freight and passenger transportation, he transferred to the ICC at that time.

From 1924 to 1934, Elliott engaged in private transportation work here and in Lakeland, Fla.

War Exigencies Hurry Divorce For Col. Warfield

Lieut. Col. William Warfield, USA, retired, obtained a divorce in District Court yesterday from Mrs. Corrine Wendel Warfield of New York, after an accelerated proceeding caused by wartime exigencies.

Warfield, through his attorneys, Warren E. Magee and William J. Bulow, asked that the divorce date be advanced because he was leaving the country to go to Egypt to be a requirements officer and adviser on engineering projects for the Foreign Economic Administration of the State Department.

Warfield, who lived at 2325 15th st. nw., was ordered to pay $150 a month alimony. The divorce was sought on the ground of five years voluntary separation. There was no contest.

The couple were married in Rome, Italy, in 1920, and parted in 1937. A son, William Warfield, jr., 20, is in the Royal Canadian Air Force.

The decree was signed by Justice James M. Proctor.

In-Laws' Visit Up to Husband, British Court Rules

London, Dec. 8 (AP).—British courts, which recently ruled that money saved by a wife in her housekeeping accounts belongs not to her but to her husband, dealt wives another jolt today.

A magistrate in Tonbridge, market town southeast of London, ruled that a husband has the right to decide who is to enter his home, including in-laws. The case before the bench involved a wife seeking a separation from her husband who was employed out of town. Coming home for occasional weekends, she charged, he objected to finding her sister there as an overnight guest.

The chairman of the bench dismissed her application, ruling that a "wife must realize that a husband is the master in his own house," and is entitled to rule on those who cross his threshold.

Cotton Crop Estimate Revised Upward

By the Associated Press

A United States cotton crop of 11,478,000 bales of 500 pounds gross weight was reported by the Agriculture Department yesterday as its final estimate of the year. This is an increase of 36,000 bales over the forecast made a month ago.

Cotton production this year compares with last year's crop of 12,817,000 bales and 12,474,000 bales the 1932-41 10-year average.

POPULAR THEN—A Classic Now!

"OH GENEVIEVE, SWEET GENEVIEVE"

ALTHOUGH poor George Tucker sold his lovely ballad for only five dollars, it has lived as a classic by its appeal to everyone of every age in every age. When first its tender strains sweetened the ear, Christian Heurich was attuning his early brewing to Washington tastes.

Like the song . . . the brew has held the public fancy to this day. Like the song, Senate Beer and Senate Ale mellow the mood. Like the song, every "encore" you give to Senate renews its appeal.

Senate
BEER & Ale

Brewed-in goodness that never reaches the palate is like a song that is never sung, so small bubble carbonation locks in the flavor of Senate Beer and Senate Ale. So, Washington lovers of fine brews say, "For that brew thirst, say Senate first."

Love Triangle Shooting Victim Near Death

Eastman, Ga., Dec. 8 (AP).—An 18-year-old girl was near death tonight from a pistol wound in the right breast which officers said was inflicted by the jealous wife of a farm overseer as a result of a rural love triangle.

The 35-year-old overseer, now missing, was sought on a charge of seducing the brunette high school senior.

The auburn-haired wife, also 35 and the mother of two children, was held in jail on a charge of kidnaping the girl, Ruby Sheppard, stepdaughter of a Rhine, Ga., farmer.

Sheriff E. J. Smith of adjoining Wilcox County identified the accused woman as Mrs. Lonnie Britt of Rochelle, Ga.

Holt said Britt was in Atlanta when the shooting occurred Monday, returned home that night and "just made off when he heard some talk that his wife was going to get him next."

Holt said the shooting took place in a truck in front of the Britts' home where the high school senior had been driven after being called out of the Rhine school.

After shooting the girl in the breast, Deputy Sheriff Holt said, Mrs. Britt took Miss Sheppard to her own home and placed her in bed. Three hours later he added, the girl was taken to her own home.

Mrs. Britt gave no statement to officers. The sheriff said James Harris Macy, 14, nephew of Mrs. Britt, witnessed the shooting.

U. S. Steel Corp. Will Negotiate New Wage Contract

Pittsburgh, Dec. 8 (AP).—United States Steel Corp., the Nation's largest producer, today announced it would negotiate a new labor contract with the United Steelworkers of America (CIO), and the union said approximately 150 other companies also had agreed to reopen their contracts.

"Big Steel's" announcement was in reply to the union's notice of intention to reopen wage negotiations after demanding a general 17-cent hourly increase for some 500,000 "basic steel" workers.

The basic hiring rate in the present CIO contract is 78 cents an hour.

Economists of the CIO union declare the 17-cent raise is sufficient only to boost wages on the same scale that living costs have risen since the "Little Steel" formula became the measuring stick for wages in September, 1942.

Father Who Killed For Daughter Freed

Cheyenne, Wyo., Dec. 8 (AP). A Laramie County District Court jury today acquitted George Moreby, 65-year-old western Nebraska farmer, of a first degree murder charge in the fatal shooting of Norman Ford, 62, Pine Bluffs pool hall operator September 1.

Moreby testified that he had observed Ford "taking liberties" with his daughter, Gladys, 16, and she testified that the shooting "was for my benefit."

Sailor Loses $65 Intended for Yule Gifts in Taxicab

When it's close to Christmas time and you're a young sailor scheduled to go overseas within the month, the loss of $65 can't be smiled away.

It was the month's pay of Ronald Douglas Ingram, seaman first class, who had intended to use it for Christmas presents for his younger sisters.

Seaman Ingram arrived in Union Station at 2 a. m. on Pearl Harbor Day and took a taxi to his home at 41 Allison st. nw. The $65, in loose bills, was lost on the trip.

If any District cabdriver has discovered $65 scattered in his vehicle, Seaman Ingram would appreciate it if the finder would inform his mother, Mrs. Katherine Ingram, TAylor 3493.

Shelved Police Officer Faces Charge Today

Policeman Robert J. Maghan, suspended last Sunday after he was arrested and charged with being drunk, is scheduled to appear at Municipal Court to answer to the charge this morning. His suspension was approved by the Commissioners yesterday.

A former detective sergeant, Maghan was demoted to private last month following an investigation of an alleged shooting affray. He subsequently filed a $150,000 damage suit against Police Chief Edward J. Kelly, Commissioner John Russell Young and Detective Chief Robert J. Barrett.

Maghan charged in his suit that his demotion came about because of resentment toward him on the part of certain high police officials. Resentment, he claimed, hinged upon his notifying OPA authorities of alleged rationing irregularities at a party for Barrett at the Elks Club.

Canned Fruit, Vegetables Up

The Office of Price Administration yesterday announced increases ranging from 1 to 16 cents a can for seven varieties of fruits and vegetables from the 1943 pack, saying the upping in ceilings was necessitated by "raw material costs."

The increases were listed for sweet potatoes, brined cherries, maraschino cherries, mushrooms, fancy whole packed tomatoes, center cuts of asparagus, processed dried prunes, and prune products.

Sweet potatoes will sell for approximately 2 cents more on a number two can, as a result of the action, mushrooms at 16 cents more on a 4-ounce can, maraschino cherries at approximately 4 cents more on an 8-ounce jar, fancy whole tomatoes for 1 cent more on a number two can, and center cuts of asparagus for 1 cent more on a number two can.

Brined cherries, which do not reach the public as such, were increased $40 a ton. Prunes, a subsidized crop, were increased due to wage raises in processors' plants, OPA said. The price of a 32-ounce bottle of prune juice will be upped by one-fifth as a result and other prune produts similarly.

The Government purchased the entire crop of 1943 and sold them to plants at 1942 prices. The wage increase in the plants, however was not covered by this subsidy, an OPA official pointed out and the increase at retail could have been prevented, he said, only by another subsidy.

Influenza

In one respect it is comforting to have the wave of head colds with which Capital residents are now afflicted characterized as a mild epidemic of influenza. Flu is a dignified disease. It calls for a consideration and commiseration not always accorded the common cold. And, happily, its effects appear to be proving not much more serious.

A Public Health Service authority on epidemology has even offered the reassuring suggestion that the current infection, so long as it continues in mild form, "might immunize" people to the more virulent germs and preclude the kind of influenza epidemic which swept the country so disastrously during the last war. We are ill-prepared for any widespread attack of serious illness. The District, in common with other communities suddenly swollen by the war, simply lacks the doctors and hospital facilities to cope with a major epidemic.

In such a situation, common sense about the care of one's health is a patriotic imperative. It behooves each of us, as best he can, to avoid contagion and to stay on the job. Prompt treatment of the early symptoms of illness is perhaps the best preventive of more dangerous consequences. It will help us to avoid infecting others. In wartime the maintenance of health is a matter of public as well as personal necessity.

Pledge To Iran

For many decades before the last war international politics were enlivened by the unending rivalry between Russia and Great Britain in what was then called Persia and is now known by its ancient name of Iran. In those days Russia, occupying the whole northern land mass of Asia and a corner of Europe as well, was persistently pushing south toward the warm waters of the Mediterranean, the Persian Gulf and the Pacific. In 1907, as a result of the increasing menace of Germany, Great Britain and Russia came together in an entente which paralleled the Anglo-French entente and supplemented the Franco-Russian alliance. But Persia, far from benefiting from this rapprochement, was threatened with extinction by it. For, as a result of the Anglo-Russian entente, northern Persia became a Russian, southern Persia a British, sphere of influence, and only a buffer region in the center was left to the Persians.

A similar possibility was envisaged by many people after the present military occupation of Iran. Iran's importance as a vital stage in the supply route between Great Britain and America to Russia and the overhanging threat from Germany left no alternative but occupation. However, fears were expressed that when the war ended the Russians would remain in Iran, and the British, too. Such a possibility can now be ruled out. In a special statement issued at Teheran following the Roosevelt-Churchill-Stalin conference, a specific pledge was given by the three nations to Iran that they want to see Iran in full enjoyment of her independence, sovereignty and territorial integrity. Furthermore, the three powers have pledged themselves to help Iran economically after the war. It is a pleasant omen for the postwar ordering.

Pacific Progress

The capture of the Gilbert Islands by our forces has been followed by a heavy assault by carrier-based planes on some of the Japanese-held Marshall Islands to the northwest. Operations are shrouded in secrecy. It is no secret, however, that the capture of the Marshalls is an early Allied objective. Unless the Marshalls are taken, our position in the newly won Gilberts would be menaced. Moreover, with the Marshalls in our hands, a two-pronged attack on the great Japanese naval base at Truk, in the Carolines, could be launched, the other prong being a concerted move from Rabaul, 800 miles south of Truk.

Here the situation likewise is brightening considerably. Once a major Japanese offensive base in the South Pacific, Rabaul has been reduced in status to a defensive outpost to which the Japanese are clinging precariously. Indeed, one high American naval officer insists that Rabaul has become "too hot to handle" for the Japanese, since the harbor and the surrounding airfields are getting such a heavy pounding from the air. At the same time a continuous air offensive against the Japanese at Bougainville and at Cape Gloucester, at the western tip of New Britain nearest New Guinea, is being carried out. In the latest raid 48 tons of bombs were dropped on Bougainville, while, over a period of eight days, 783 tons of bombs have been dropped on Cape Gloucester.

In view of what happened at Tarawa, it must not be assumed that the Japanese can be sufficiently softened by air attacks to make the occupation of Rabaul easy. Sooner or later, however, it is certain that Rabaul will be taken. Then we can move against Truk from Rabaul and from the Marshalls and Gilberts. An actual invasion of the Caroline Islands may be avoided, for it would be an extremely expensive undertaking. The objective at Truk, in other words, would not be that island itself but the Japanese fleet, which, through aerial assaults, could either be crippled or forced to find shelter elsewhere. It is evident that our offensive in the Pacific is growing apace.

Last Appeal

The primary issue before the American people today is whether we are going to keep down the cost of living. That is the way that Justice Byrnes regards our situation on the home front. By saying that the issue is primary, the man who is really our Deputy President and who is acting in the President's stead while Mr. Roosevelt is away meant that the issue is urgent. It is this urgency which explains the gravity in the presentation of the problem by Mr. Byrnes. Our Director of War Mobilization seems to think of the renewed assault on the cost of living as the last push which if successful would overwhelm the inflation dam. And he is under no illusions as to the feasibility of going back to prepared retreats. "If we do not hold the line now," he said, "I confess I do not know how or where we are going to hold back the floodgates of inflation." Implicit in Mr. Byrnes' talk is that at the breakthrough he would not be on hand to serve as King Canute.

The force beating on the dam is the surplus money for which there are no equivalent civilian goods. The surplus is called the "inflationary gap." To be sure, it is growing bigger, and nobody can underrate the pressure of an excess of money left over from bloated wartime incomes. But it is not surplus money that makes the present force so formidable. There is always more money available than goods to buy in a country of savers like the United States. Sizable as is the gap between incomes and goods, it is nothing like the gap between incomes plus accumulated savings and goods. What prevents the American people from rushing to turn all its money into goods? Only faith in the dollar. That faith is ingrained, almost an instinct, and it can withstand a terrific effort to undermine it. But the spectacle of men who should be guardians of the dam going over the divide to promote the push against it might kill the faith of the American people in the American dollar. And this is what is happening today. It is this spectacle that has moved Mr. Byrnes to invoke the aid of the American people. They must call upon the guardians of the dam to go back to their jobs.

Watch and ward over the dam is the task of the people's Government. This means the Legislature as well as the Administration. The prime responsibility, of course, belongs to the Administration, and to the Administration the Legislature has given the tools. Yet Congress will not leave the job to the stabilizers appointed under its own enabling statutes. It is trying to hamstring them. The House already has voted to take out of their hands the vital weapon of subsidies. On the Senate side a bill has been reported out which would overrule the wage award for the railroad workers. A tax bill is on the way through the Senate, having been passed by the House, which would provide only a fifth of the revenue asked by the Treasury. None of this handiwork has been undertaken in the public interest. In subsidies and wages the House has been seized by selfish interests seeking to profit by the war emergency. The lack of vigorous action on the tax bill is just a show of plain pusillanimity.

We do not imply that the Administration itself is without blame. Far from it. Justice Byrnes himself appears to confess weakness in the management of the wage sector through the handling of the coal award. The decision, he says, was "a very close one." Presumably he means that there is plausibility in the argument that the Administration itself dented the dam holding back the inflation. He likewise seemed to confess that the award showed lack of Administration teamwork. The sight of the lack of a common front among the agencies charged with the stabilization task was not encouraging to Congress. Still that is no argument to justify Congress in backing other groups which would make the coal wage dent into a gaping hole past retrieval. In that course lies disaster for all. As Mr. Byrnes asks, "If Congress fixes the wages of one group that is dissatisfied with the decision of the stabilization director, how can it refuse to fix the wages of other groups?" The answer is that it cannot. It would be swamped by demands, and on the record it would succumb. Thus in self-defense alone Congress should heed this reminder and reassert its allegiance to the general welfare. Seldom before has the national interest been so paramount. It is the people's dollar that is at stake—the dollar, that is to say, that reposes in insurance policies and savings accounts, as well as money in pocket.

None has a greater stake in the dollar than the men on active service. The least they expect of their Government is that it shall be trustees of their savings. Mr. Byrnes' address should awaken the people to remind Congress of this fact. The loose talk about the desirability of a controlled inflation should be analyzed for what it really means. "Such talk," as Mr. Byrnes says, "is just as criminally reckless as a proposal for a controlled forest fire or a controlled epidemic of smallpox." He might have added that it is a proposal to take a lien on the savings of every man in the armed forces. The veterans would certainly seek a reckoning with those whom they would regard quite rightly as saboteurs behind the lines. Let the wreckers who are now pushing the irresistible force of inflation switch their allegiance and join the men at the dam in creating an immovable object.

Give It Another Chance

The hearing on the Hobbs bill—which would reverse the rule laid down by the Supreme Court in the McNabb case—shows how much more difficult it is to correct an error than to make one. Attorney General Biddle does not favor the Hobbs bill because it would encroach upon the policy of entrusting to the Supreme Court the development of "evidential doctrine" in criminal cases. Yet he is disturbed by the confusion to which the McNabb decision has given rise. In place of the Hobbs bill, he would have Congress enact a law clarifying its intent as to how soon suspected violators of the law must be taken before a committing officer.

To this Representative Hobbs says "amen." There is no reason why one Federal statute should require arraignment of a suspect "immediately," while others specify no time limit. Perhaps the ends of justice would be well served by requiring arraignment in all cases, as the Attorney General suggests, "within a reasonable time." But Congressman Hobbs insists that the Biddle proposal should supplement and not replace his bill. It would take years, he says, for the courts to establish the meaning of "reasonable time" in actual practice. And since the Supreme Court held that the McNabbs were not arraigned with "reasonable promptness" it would presumably go ahead throwing out confessions obtained under similar circumstances.

In our inexpert judgment both proposals fall somewhat short of the ideal. While wholly constructive as far as it goes, the Attorney General's suggestion doesn't seem to go far enough. And Mr. Hobbs' bill may go too far. It is true that the bill would merely restore the law to what it was before the Court handed down the McNabb decision. But the restoration would be effected by a rigid statute which would leave the courts without sanctions against law-enforcement officers who themselves violate the law. Maybe enactment of this bill will be necessary to end the present confusion. But Congress might at least give the Supreme Court an opportunity to make its position clear. The Court has a chance to do so in the Mitchell case now before it on petition from the Department of Justice.

A review of the whole situation by the Supreme Court seems to be particularly desirable because of the fact that its decision in the McNabb case was based on a half truth. "The record leaves no room for doubt," the Court said through Justice Frankfurter, "that the questioning of the petitioners took place while they were in the custody of the arresting officers and before any order of commitment was made." But the record was simply incomplete. Actually the McNabbs were not illegally held, as the Attorney General noted in his testimony on the Hobbs bill. They had been arraigned on liquor charges that did not show up in the record of their trial for murder. Had the Court known all the facts, its decision might have been different. We cannot believe that it would require a confession of murder to be thrown out because the suspect had been arraigned at the time of his arrest on a lesser charge. The most reasonable first step, therefore, is to give the Court another chance.

No Delay

War Food Administrator Marvin Jones strongly opposes postponement of Senate action on the bill to repeal food subsidies. Administration leaders have been angling for a 60-day delay, hoping, apparently, that during the Christmas recess antisubsidy Senators might get in touch with their constituents and experience a change of heart. The WFA cannot afford to gamble on any such contingency. The price-control agencies and the farmers of the country cannot wait weeks and months for a decision. They must lay their plans for next year's plantings very soon. With the subsidy program hanging in the balance, neither the farmers nor the price-control agencies know what to do. Consequently Mr. Jones is well advised to seek action now. As he says, "nothing is as unsettling as uncertainty." And he might have added that nothing is as demoralizing to public morale as the spectacle of Congress wrangling over a subsidy program that should have been disposed of weeks ago in accordance with general policies previously formulated by the legislative branch of government.

DIRECTION

Under the skirt of the wood
The green field falls
Silk in the sun
To the branch to the run
Of Timothy clover and Queen Anne's lace
Under the bow of the sky
The loose clouds fly
Eastward toward the sun's fixed eye.
And silver bent, wind brushed,
Leaning over the east,
Maples sluice the wind
In green unrest.
Under the scallop shadows
Of trees and the flying cloud
Hither and yon the tumble run
Of children sparks the day.
No sure direction theirs and yet
Against time's shadow curtain
See the varying music motion of the children
Hurrying, scurrying, all their play
Tangent to green purpose of this day.

America At War

By Selden Menefee

Inflation Ignorance

SEVERAL CONGRESSMEN have been quoted as saying that there is little apparent popular support for subsidies to keep prices down. The mail, they say, runs the other way.

The fact is, nearly all the organized expressions of opinion reaching Congress are from those groups which want to scuttle the Administration's subsidy program and let prices "find their own level"—which could only mean a level much higher than now, in view of the billions of dollars in "hot money" now floating around loose.

But the public is really worried about inflation, as witness the results of a public opinion poll released this week by the National Opinion Research Center in Denver. Nine out of ten Americans feel that any further increase in food prices would be a bad thing for the country as a whole.

Letting Prices Go

Only one person in 20 favors letting prices go; and since more than 2 in 20 are farmers, this must mean that a majority even of that group is against increased prices for foodstuffs.

Furthermore, almost 8 out of 10 Americans are convinced that if the prices on some foods are allowed to rise further, increases will then follow in the prices of other commodities. And 8 out of 10 believe that increased wages and salaries would result if food prices spiral upward.

Why, then, doesn't Congress hear from the people on the subsidy issue? The sad truth is, more than half of the people are unfamiliar with the meaning of the term "farm subsidy." When asked to define it, 37 per cent said frankly that they didn't know, and 20 per cent gave incorrect explanations.

Only 43 per cent gave reasonably accurate answers, such as the housewife in Orange, N. J., who said, "A certain amount the Government gives the farmer to replace what he does not make when he sells food," and the Illinois attorney who said, "If there's a ceiling price the Government makes up to the farmer the price he should get. The taxpayer pays it."

Moreover, less than half the people questioned knew the present status of the subsidy program. When asked whether the Government is giving farmers subsidies at this time, 44 per cent admitted they didn't know and another 7 per cent mistakenly replied "no."

The people not only lack information on the subsidy program; they do not even understand the nature of inflation, heartily as they may oppose it. Recently Princeton's Office of Public Opinion Research asked a cross-section of America to pick the basic cause of inflation from among these three statements:

1. Prices go up faster than wages are increased.
2. There are fewer things for people to buy and at the same time people have more money to spend for those things.
3. The Government has to use so much food and material for war purposes here and abroad that there is very little left for us to buy.

Only 4 people out of 10 chose the second statement.

Educational Programs

We have failed in our wartime educational program. The OWI put out a few pamphlets on inflation a few months ago, but they reached at most only a few million people. And now even that agency is prohibited by Congress from doing anything further along this line. The public press has done some good educational work, through newspaper cartoons and editorials, but not enough.

Yet the public can be educated. An article by Gerard B. Lambert and Hadley Cantril of the OPOR, in the current issue of the Public Opinion Quarterly, shows how it can be done.

Lambert and Cantril used the population of Brunswick, N. J., as guinea pigs for the neatest experiment in applied psychology that I have seen in a long time. First they presented the residents of the town with the same three statements cited above, and asked them to select the one that best described the cause of inflation. Only 30 per cent picked the right answer.

Next they got the editor of the local paper to run a little contest with a first prize of $50 and 27 smaller prizes for the best 25-word essay on inflation. A full-page ad for the contest gave a simple explanation of the cause of inflation in large letters:

1. There is more money to spend—but
2. There are fewer things to buy.

When the contest was over, a second survey of opinion similar to the first one was made. The proportion of people picking the right answer rose by only 3 per cent in the general population. But among those who said that they had read the contest ad carefully, the percentage of correct answers rose from 30 per cent to 63 per cent.

If enough people can be reached, obviously an understanding of the conditions underlying inflation can be produced. If a single ad can have this much effect on its readers, a sustained educational program of equal directness and simplicity, using the press, radio and movies, would have a tremendous effect.

Walt Disney would be a good person to start the ball rolling. How about it, Mr. Disney? And how about letting OWI carry on from there, gentlemen of Congress?

Turkey's Role

By Barnet Nover

Probable Consequences Of Cairo

DURING RECENT YEARS the role which Turkey has played in international affairs has been dictated by a combination of seven principal factors:

(1) friendship for her ally, Great Britain; (2) fear of Germany; (3) suspicion of Russia and of Russia's resurgent nationalism; (4) admiration for the United States and awareness of America's potential power; (5) the vulnerability of Turkish cities, notably Istanbul, to air attack particularly from nearby Balkan bases; (6) the Turkish army's lack of modern weapons; (7) above all, the desire of the overwhelming majority of Turks to stay out of the war.

The net result of all these factors combined has been to keep Turkey neutral even though the tides of war have swirled all around her. The Allies have fought the Axis and its satellites in Greece, in the Aegean, in Iraq, in Syria, in the Black Sea and in the Caucasus. Turkey has remained at peace.

THERE CAN be no gainsaying the fact that Turkish neutrality proved, in the past, not without its real advantages to the Allies.

The Turks, a singularly hard-headed people, refused to become panicky when the Germans swept down through the Balkans to the Aegean.

The Ankara government refused to follow the example of Hungary, Rumania and Bulgaria and climb on what then looked like the winning bandwagon.

Turkey remained a barrier to a German drive toward the oil fields of Iraq, the Persian Gulf. Her belief in an ultimate Allied victory did not flag even when a German army was battering away at Stalingrad and a German-Italian force had come within 60 miles of Alexandria.

SINCE THOSE DAYS the situation in Europe, Africa and the Middle East has undergone a radical transformation. A modification of the Turkish position is not only necessary but inevitable.

Today, it is no longer the Allies but the Germans and their satellites who are on the defensive. The war in Europe is approaching a grand climax.

"We have concerted our plans for the destruction of the German forces," says the Anglo-Russian-American Declaration of Teheran. "We have reached agreement as to the scope and timing of operations which will be undertaken from the east, west and south."

A glance at the map shows how such operations, particularly those from the south, would be greatly facilitated if the Allies were in a position to use Turkey as a base. That would enable them to bypass the Dodecanese where the Germans are once again entrenched in force. It would enable them to carry the war directly and easily to Germany's most exposed satellite, Bulgaria. It would make possible an aerial assault against Axis positions in the Balkans that would enormously complicate the German transportation problem.

ANTICIPATING some such possibilities, the Germans have recently been reinforcing their garrisons along the Bulgar-Turkish border. Istanbul, only weakly defended against air attack, is more exposed than ever. In the meantime the Nazis are redoubling their political pressure on the Ankara government to remain neutral.

Given the present situation the likelihood is that Turkey will remain neutral for a while longer and it is doubtful whether, in view of her present manpower shortages, Germany has the strength to wage a preventive war against the Turks. But the nearer that the day approaches when the Teheran time-table is to be put into effect the more difficult it will be for Turkey to remain a mere spectator in the war.

The indications point in the opposite direction. It is evident from the communique issued after the meeting of President Roosevelt, Prime Minister Churchill and President Ismet Inonu of Turkey, that the factors governing the Turkish attitude in the past have undergone a real modification in certain particulars.

IN THE FIRST PLACE, Turkish fear of Germany, while by no means eliminated, has tended to fade out as German power has declined and as the indications have mounted that a German defeat is inevitable.

Secondly, Turkish suspicions of Russia have been weakened as a result of the Moscow conference, the agreement reached at Teheran regarding the future independence and sovereignty of Turkey's neighbor, Iran, and the assurances given to President Ismet Inonu by the American and British leaders, regarding Russian policy.

Thirdly, Turkey's military strength has been growing although it is still far from adequate.

Fourthly, Allied power in the Middle East is mounting so that in the event of a German attack upon her Turkey's security could be bolstered up by the Allies.

THE CAIRO COMMUNIQUE is reticent to the point of silence on the subject of Turkey's military plans.

The cordiality of the language employed in describing Turkey's attitude toward and relations with Great Britain, America and Russia do suggest, however, that Turkey is preparing to abandon neutrality for more active cooperation with the Allies and, should that be necessary, for actual belligerency.

Only the dates remain to be filled in.

Record Of UFWA

Eleanor Nelson must think that people have short memories according to her statement in Jerry Klutz's column of Saturday, December 4, that the United Federal Workers of America has not followed the Communist line, and that the union never agitated against conscription.

My memory goes back to the founding of the UFWA. I was in one of the first locals to break away from the AFGE to join the CIO Government Union. I was an active participant from that time until a few years ago when Nelson and her gang and the ever-changing "line" tried my patience to such an extent that I resigned.

There are many like me who remember the active participation of the UFWA in the American Peace Mobilization. Its campaign against the Conscription Act and lend-lease is a matter of record that could be found in the minutes of any local at its meetings of that period.

The anti-Roosevelt, pro-Lewis and pro-Willkie line was the topic of many meetings at the time when the Communist Party was yelling the same thing.

The epithet of warmonger was used against Roosevelt by the UFWA at the same time the Daily Worker was headlining it.

The newcomers to the UFWA may not know these facts, but we who have worked in the union can recall them and many more instances where the UFWA forgot its purpose as a union to play along with the band led by the Communist Party.

Equal Distribution

In event we should decide to try the equal distribution idea, what will we adopt as a standard for that equality? Will it be a million dollars for everyone or a hundred, a palace or log cabin, an Oxford degree or a high school diploma, a Packard or a Ford, a 25-cent cigar or a corncob pipe, a pot of beans or a beef stew, a presidency or a woodcutter's job?

I am a little afraid that the equal distribution idea will never be literally accomplished—unless it would be by people living naturally, and there is even reason to doubt that it can be accomplished that way. J. J. SPERRY.

Korea's Independence

Your editorial regarding Korea's independence as predicted at the Cairo Conference is appreciated by all Americans who are interested in seeing justice done to the enslaved peoples of the world.

For over 4000 years the people of Korea governed themselves, were a cultured, civilized, peace-loving people. To them must go the credit for many inventions and discoveries, such as movable metal type, ironclad battleships, etc.

The fact that the world knows so little of Korea after only 38 years of Japanese enslavement should make us all stop and think. Japanese propaganda has given the world only the information favorable to Japan, has stolen credit for many things Korean, such as the cherry trees around the Potomac Tidal Basin here in Washington.

It is to be hoped that we do not continue to play into the enemy's hands by underestimtaing their ability and their strength. Let us get arms and munitions to China and Korea as fast as we can, by whatever means possible, so that these people can help us defeat our common enemy. We should let nothing stand in our way to arm these traditional enemies of Japan, to use their people and their land and their knowledge of the Japanese. They are begging us to take them; what are we waiting for?

Rabies Regulations

Although some people may become a bit weary of the continuing controversy over rabies, I am hoping that the matter will not cease being discussed and that a solution will finally be forthcoming which will eliminate the disgraceful situation of today.

I must confess that it is beyond my understanding that stricter enforcement measures are not adopted immediately to meet a real menace.

In and about Washington I propose that the following regulations be made effective:

1. Any dog permitted to run loose or found without muzzle and leash shall be killed, and the owner shall be fined not less than $50.
2. Any owner of a cat or dog shall have the animal inoculated with antirabies serum within 30 days or be fined not less than $100.
3. Any cat found without leash shall be killed, and the owner shall be fined not less than $50.

Eastern Europe

By Paul Winkler

Federation Plans

REPORTS FROM informed observers indicate that Russia, until recently opposed to the various projects for eastern European federations is now giving them the green light. What is the reason for this change?

Up to the time of the Moscow Conference, Russia considered that the plans for Danubian confederations, Balkan federations, or combinations of them, were directed specifically against her—that the object was to build up a cordon sanitaire under the influence of some other large power or powers which might be dangerous to her own security in the future.

Today that picture has changed. Not only is Russia no longer afraid of the cordon sanitaire, but she now envisages federations of states whose individual members will have pacts with herself. Thus she herself would wield the influence over these federations which she had feared would fall into the hands of some other power.

The beginning of her attempt to combine the settlement of the problems of eastern Europe with the safeguarding of her own security is to be seen in the Russo-Czech Treaty, which may well be one of the most concrete results of the recent conferences in Cairo and Teheran. Its importance resides not only in the fact that it is likely to be the first of a series of treaties, and hence the pattern for the rest, but also in the probability that Czechoslovakia may now become the activating agent for extending the system to other countries.

Logical Federations

For instance, the most logical country to enter into negotiations for an eastern European federation next is Poland—and it is precisely through Czechoslovakia that Poland can most easily be drawn into them. These two countries had, indeed, made a very considerable start toward confederation on their own initiative before Russia's fear of its meaning to her caused her to apply her influence on Czechoslovakia to halt the process. Previously, Czechoslovakia had discussed federation with Poland as far back as 1940, and on November 10 of that year, a joint declaration of the two governments laid the foundation for postwar unity between them. There were further conversations in January, 1942, but they did little to tighten political ties, though they did produce military agreements between Poland and Czechoslovakia.

Poland today seems ripe to renew discussions with Czechoslovakia, but there may be a hitch in that she will probably have to come to some sort of an understanding with Russia on the frontier question first. This is a ticklish problem—but it is not the only difficulty which is going to be encountered in attempting to organize the very diverse eastern European nations into a federation.

It is too early yet for there to be much clarity on the territory which such a federation would cover—and particularly whether it would extend to the Balkans.

Austria, when detached from Germany, as the Moscow Conferences promised that it would be, might very well find a place in it. Hungary, geographically, would be a natural member, but politically more doubts might be expressed. Czechoslovak leaders themselves have expressed reservations about bringing Hungary in—even a Hungary freed from the influence of Germany—because that country is ruled by a feudal-minded group of aristocrats, and it would require a considerable internal evolution to make it possible to fit her within the framework of a large federation based on democratic principles. However, Czech statesmen in the United States and England are in constant touch with democratic Hungarian emigres, and if they succeed in providing guarantees for a truly democratic transformation of Hungary, her inclusion would become probable.

Rumania and Bulgaria

Similar difficulties, and similar possibilities of solution, exist for Germany's other two reluctant allies, Rumania and Bulgaria, who are likewise possibilities for the eventual federation.

However the confederation is established, it is certain that much of its territory will be congruent with that of the former Austro-Hungarian empire, which, however unwieldy it may have been politically, was economically a sound structure whose destruction was harmful to many of the succession states which had once belonged to it.

The effect of the dissolution of the Austro-Hungarian economic combination is easy to see from figures on import duties which are not widely known. The tariffs on a series of 20 major commodities entering the former country over its outer borders used to amount to an average of 12 per cent ad valorem. By 1925, the duties on the same commodities, as they passed inner borders which had formerly been inside the Austro-Hungarian customs frontier, amounted to from 40 per cent to 70 per cent ad valorem in the various succession states. This was the result of competition among the small countries, causing the strangulation of interstate trade, and, finally, economic misery for the populations of many parts of the affected territory. The elimination of this situation is one of the strongest arguments which can be put forward for the constitution of an eastern confederation.

Today And Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

The Too Far-Sighted

IN TRAVELLING about a bit lately I have been struck by meeting, in almost every gathering where men and women were talking about affairs, at least one or two who were so weighed down by the unsolved problems of the future that they could find little satisfaction in the results achieved at Moscow, Cairo and Teheran. They are the too far-sighted. And though they mean very well, perhaps even too well, they have such a long view of the distant future that they have little attention left for the nearest future and the immediate present.

LIPPMANN

A few months ago these far-sighted people were able to take no satisfaction in Stalingrad and the great Russian counter-offensive; they were brooding on the chances of a separate peace between Russia and Germany. They were brooding also on their apprehension that Great Britain would default on the Pacific war and that Britain and Russia would never restore the integrity of China or admit China to full equality among the great states.

NOW THAT these far-sighted forebodings have not come true, they have forgotten they ever had them. They have a new set of forebodings. They find that while the Cairo conference settled the boundaries of Japan, it did not settle the future of Hongkong, Burma, Indo-China, and of the whole colonial and dependent world. They find that while the Teheran conference settled the military issues which threatened to divide Russia from the western allies, this is not a sufficiently interesting achievement. The Teheran conference, they find, did not declare on the future of defeated Germany, the status of the contending forces within Greece, Yugoslavia, and Central Europe, etc., etc.

They are far-sighted to the point where being far-sighted can easily become a kind of nervous disease which paralyzes their will, their faith, and their practical resolution. They are like a man and woman who would feel they could not get married until they had agreed on the number, the dates of birth, and the sex of their children, the make of the car, the refrigerator, and the radio they would buy when Johnny was old enough to go to college and Sally was ready to go out dancing with her friends. I have been meeting people who were shaking their heads because no one had told them who would succeed Stalin, Chiang Kai-shek, Churchill, and Roosevelt, and how, they asked me, can we be sure that anything has been achieved if we cannot see clearly the future of mankind.

THE MANNER in which we are dealing with the future after this war is indeed quite different from the settlement of the other great war. The last time we tried to settle the whole war after we had finished fighting it. This time we are making specific settlements as we approach the climax of the war. Moreover, and this is for the excessively far-sighted the most novel and puzzling aspect of the matter: we have learned that it is better to settle one question after another than to try to settle all of them at once.

For we have learned to our great advantage that if we deal with all questions at once, they may all become insoluble. The difficulties of each issue multiply the difficulties of every other issue. If on the other hand, we settle questions in their right order of importance, each settlement makes the next settlement easier. When Stalin and Churchill had agreed on a common strategy and a working partnership in great matters, they found it much easier to agree on the future of Iran. If they had started with Iran before they had resolved their more important differences, they might never have agreed on Iran.

THERE IS HERE not only a sound rule of diplomacy: it is elementary practical wisdom in all the affairs of life. If, for example, a young man in high school wishes at the age of 40 to be the vice president of the First National Bank, the worst way to realize his ambition is for him to try to decide at the age of 15 whether for a vice president of the bank it will do him any good to study botany. He had better do as well as he can what he has to do immediately, be it botany or basketball; that will prepare him better for the bank than being too calculating and far-sighted about his career.

My impression, indeed my firm conviction, is that our own people will gain confidence in a settlement which is made in this practical and specific way. They would shrink from grandiose and global plans which professed to settle everything for ever; our people are too shrewd to put much faith in such plans. On the other hand, they will, indeed they do, approve and support a method which consists in crossing bridges when you come to them, a method which does not pretend that there is a single carpet by which mankind can overlap the jungles and the mountains and land plump and breathless in the promised land.

WMC Will Seek Better Data As Basis of Manpower Policy

Manpower Chief Paul V. McNutt has drafted a directive which would enable the War Manpower Commission to secure more precise information of manpower needs, thereby making appropriate adjustments in WMC programs and cutting down manpower waste.

The need for the directive developed as a result of charges by the Senate Truman Committee of hoarded labor in the Dallas plant of the North American Aviation Co. A WMC check disclosed the Truman charges to be true and an employment ceiling was imposed on the plant, reducing its labor demand considerably.

Under the proposed new procedure, WMC would be able to secure production information needed to check an employer's estimates of his manpower needs. The manpower needs estimates also would be checked by procurement officials assigned to the plants in question and could be used as the basis for establishment of employment ceilings, thereby controlling the manpower supply of a specified war plant.

WMC decided to clarify its powers after it became clear that a failure to act on the question would result in the War Department setting up machinery to handle the problem of manpower utilization, bypassing the WMC.

In conferences with War Department officials, WMC officials argued that McNutt was legally responsible for manpower utilization under existing executive orders, and therefore had a right to verified information on manpower needs.

Senate Limits War, Navy Dept. Funds to Purposes Authorized

By Robert C. Albright

The Senate voted overwhelmingly yesterday to rigidly restrict War and Navy Department spending to purposes specified by Congress in war appropriation acts.

The Senate suspended its rules by a 62-to-10 vote, in order to adopt the flat legislative ban on shifts of military funds to a Budget Bureau reserve, or to purposes unauthorized by Congress.

The limitation was written into the $308,340,000 deficiency appropriation bill, but extended to past military appropriations, including the 71 billion dollars previously voted the War Department this year.

Thee deficiency bill, together with this so-called McKellar rider, was then passed by the Senate, despite a brisk fight by Senator Henry Cabot Lodge, jr. (Republican) of Massachusetts, to give the military greater flexibility in war spending.

Lodge offered an amendment to permit the War and Navy Departments to retain authority to shift up to 10 per cent of unexpended appropriations from items for which they were not needed to other necessary projects.

The Lodge amendment was rejected 48 to 22. Senator Bennett Clark (Democrat) of Missouri and other opponents of the shifts contended it would give the military a "seven billion dollar kitty."

The new restriction on war spending, sponsored by Senator Kenneth McKellar (Democrat) of Tennessee, was partially inspired by Budget Bureau denial that 13 billion dollars of unneeded former appropriations actually would be "turned back" to the Treasury. The Budget Bureau made it clear that such funds, although not needed now, would be held in reserve to meet possible future more urgent needs.

The McKellar amendment not only would abolish this reserve procedure; it would "rescind and cancel" these surplus appropriations, and require War and Navy heads to certify the amount to the Treasury and to Congress.

A second provision of the amendment denies the Budget Bureau authority to "impound, hold in reserve or use for any other purpose" funds heretofore, herein or hereafter appropriated to any agency for construction of a particular project.

An amendment to the bill by Senator Richard B. Russell (Democrat) of Georgia increases Public Health Service funds to provide for payments up to $250, plus travel and transportation costs, to doctors and dentists who agree with local communities facing a dearth of medical facilities, to relocate in such an area for not less less than a year.

Among funds added to the House-passed bill by the Senate was 50 million dollars to help war-congested communities provide needed public facilities and 44 million dollars which the House denied to the FSA. The bill retains a 5 million dollar supplemental appropriation for the use of OWI overseas.

British Describe Increased Intensity In Bombing of Foe

London, Dec. 8 (AP).—The increase in intensity of the British bomber command's offensive against Europe in the last year was sharply outlined today by an RAF commentator who disclosed that the British sent up 4500 individual night bomber flights in November as compared with 1600 both day and night for the same month a year ago.

These flights loosed 14,300 long tons of bombs. In addition medium and fighter-bombers, in greatly expanded fighter command operations, dropped an additional 1000 tons last month.

Hoover Indorses Moscow Pact After Interview With Landon

New York, Dec. 8 (AP).—Former President Herbert Hoover, in a formal statement after a conference with Alf M. Landon, Republican presidential nominee in 1936, said today that he approved the Moscow pact and that Landon, in their conversation, had not taken a position in opposition.

The statement said in part: "Governor Landon and I discussed the war and domestic situation generally. The Governor did not take a position in opposition to the Moscow pact, either in his public statements or to me personally. I, naturally, approve it, inasmuch as it adopts the transition period and other principles which I have advocated for the past 18 months."

Landon, in a talk to freshmen U. S. Senators in Washington Saturday, had said he was apprehensive that the pact had settled more than military arrangements and added he could "find no evidence that the Russians have yielded one inch in regard to their well-known territorial aspirations or political ambitions in Europe." The one-time presidential candidate also called the Moscow conference "hazy," except for the Russian statements.

Foreign Relations Discussed

Hoover said Landon did not oppose the suggestion of an identical foreign relations plank for both parties—derided by Landon in his talk to the Senators—and asserted that Landon would, "when the time comes, six months hence, favor full consideration to specific proposals from the Administration in that direction."

"The Governor is deeply interested in securing a lasting peace but has rightly objected to advance pledges of Republicans to commitments on peace settlements until those proposals are made known," Hoovers' statement said. "I should expect every sensible citizen, irrespective of party, to hold that attitude."

On the suggestion of a joint foreign policy plank, Landon Saturday asked his audience "just what foreign policy does the President stand for?"

"Such a course would accelerate the danger of a drift toward one party in our country," Landon added at that time.

"Strong Republican Party"

After the conference with Hoover, Landon told reporters they had not discussed possible Republican presidential candidates or talked politics. Asked directly whether he was organizing for or against any candidate, Landon replied:

"I am just interested in one thing—under the two-party system which is the essence of democracy—in building up a strong Republican Party."

Landon, after a 20-minute conference with Gov. Thomas E. Dewey yesterday, called him "the outstanding possibility" for the 1944 Republican candidacy.

Asked if he would declare for Dewey, Landon replied:

"I don't think it is necessary for me to answer that now," he told reporters, "but I think it is perfectly safe for you to say that I go along with the preponderant sentiment; I recognize him as the outstanding possibility."

Told what the former Kansas Governor had said, Dewey smiled and replied: "Thank you very much."

"Comment?"

"No comment," answered Dewey as he shook his head twice.

Tojo Calls Allied PlanPresumptuous

New York, Dec. 8 (AP).—The British-American leaders at the Cairo conference were "presumptuous" in saying they want Japan "to become a third-class nation," Japanese Premier Hideki Tojo declared today, according to a Tokyo radio broadcast recorded by the OWI.

"Such propaganda is merely a strategic illusion to camouflage their repeated failures," Tojo said. A translation indicated Tojo made no mention of China or of the presence of President Chiang Kai-shek at the Cairo meeting.

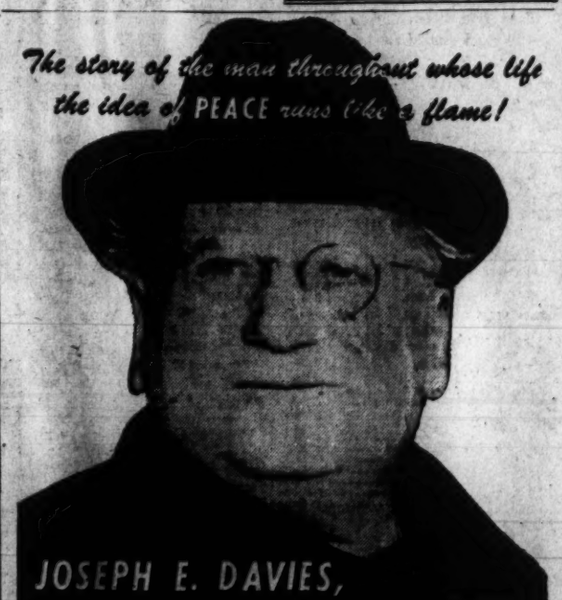
The story of the man throughout whose life the idea of PEACE runs like a flame!



JOSEPH E. DAVIES,
former U. S. Ambassador to the U. S. S. R.
says: This book gives the unfamiliar account of what in fact is an exciting and romantic life. Here appear those forces through the years which combined to temper, refine and strengthen those qualities of courage, high-mindedness, shrewdness, together with the blunt moral integrity and practical idealism which characterizes Litvinoff. It is fascinating reading.
An interesting feature of the book is the authoritative manner in which the history of Russia in the last 25 years is unfolded. For in this story of Litvinoff's life there is reflected the story of Russia. I know of no available book which would present to the American public anything like it.
It is a good job, well done, and a valuable contribution to an understanding of the Soviet attitude, as to the present, as well as to the future. It is indispensable reading for any one who wishes to understand this new phenomenon in historical evolution — the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics.

Liquor Stock Speculators Caught 'Short'

Financial sources reported yesterday that the whisky shortage had brought woe to the speculators who have been "fighting" the recent spectacular advance in the shares of American Distilling Co. on the New York Stock Excange.

In the last few months the stock climbed from around $30 to its current price of $120 a share. It jumped $6 Tuesday and $7 yesterday.

The rise, according to market observers, has all the earmarks of a squeeze of the "shorts"—those who borrowed the shares to sell them in the market in the hopes of buying back at lower prices.

A considerable part of the stock's meteoric rise was recorded after the company last month announced the declaration of a whisky dividend—one barrel for each share of stock. Stockholders would pay $32 a barrel for the liquor, or approximately half the OPA ceiling price value. A person "short" of a stock must make provision that the lender of the stock—the owner—receives any dividends declared.

Key Industrial, Rail Securities Continue Rise

New York, Dec. 8 (AP).—The stock market today maintained its December bullish tempo with another broad array of gains in industrial and rail leaders.

Final advances in top-ranking issues ranged from fractions to more than a point. The rise brought a substantial increase in volume, the 1,320,000 shares traded representing the first better-than-a-million day since November 9 and comparing with Tuesday's 883,750.

Factors which seemed to have most influence on the buying revival were elimination of recent speculative anxiety over the Near East conferences and an unexpectedly small flow of tax selling.

A brisk upturn in the first hour reflected carryover buying on Tuesday's late rise. This brought out some profit selling out it failed to arrest the swing and many stocks closed around the day's highs.

The Associated Press 60-stock composite at the end was up .4 of a point at 49. Of the 913 issues traded, 633 advanced, 131 declined and 149 were unchanged.

Up a point or better were Bethlehem Steel, American Can, Eastman Kodak, Philip Morris, Douglas Aircraft, Chrysler, Deere, Oliver Farm, Owens-Illinois and Santa Fe. Some advance was shown by Sears Roebuck, Anaconda, Union Carbide, and most carrier shares. American Distilling added 6 points to its recent string of wide upswings. Such issues as U.S. Steel, Westinghouse and Western Union were backward.

Bonds were steady. Chicago wheat closed 1⅛ to 1½ cent a bushel lower. Hogs were unchanged.

Chicago Grain

Chicago, Dec. 8 (AP).—A notable absence of commercial demand caused wheat prices to drift lower today, although the market was quiet and without any pressing liquidation. Much of the trading interest was centered in rye, which ran up to new seasonal highs at one time on buying by Eastern commission houses.

At the close wheat was ⅛ to ½ lower. December 1.68¼. Oats were unchanged to ½ down. December 81⅝@81¾. Rye was unchanged to ⅛ higher. December 1.18⅝, and barley was ⅛ lower to ¼ higher. December 1.22¾.

Norman H. Davis was renamed chairman of the American Red Cross yesterday by President Roosevelt, it was announced at the annual meeting of the Board of Incorporators yesterday. Chief Justice Harlan Fiske Stone, presided.

At a meeting of the Central Committee, also held yesterday, Edward Dana, president and general manager of the Boston, Mass. Elevated Railway, and treasurer of the Boston Chapter of the Red Cross, was elected a member of the committee. Three members of the committee were reelected and five members reappointed by the President.

Dana takes the place of a fellow Bostonian, Eliot Wadsworth, whose term expired. Reelected were Lloyd B. Wilson, president of the Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co.; Harry L. Hopkins, and Gurney E. Newlin, Los Angeles lawyer.

Reappointed by the President, in addition to Chairman Davis, were Edward R. Stettinius, jr., Undersecretary of State; Maj. Gen. Norman T. Kirk, surgeon general, United States Army; Rear Admiral Ross T. McIntire, surgeon general, United States Navy; Daniel W. Bell, Undersecretary of the Treasury, and Francis Biddle, Attorney General.

Four vacancies on the Board of Incorporators were filled by the election of S. Sloan Colt, president of the Bankers Trust Co., New York; Walter S. Gifford, president of the American Telephone and Telegraph Co.; Joseph R. Hamlen, chairman of the Boston chapter; and Mrs. Dean Witter, San Francisco, administrator, Volunteer Special Services, Pacific area. The vacancies were created by the death of Samuel Knight, San Francisco; the Rt. Rev. James E. Freeman, Bishop of Washington; Mrs. Leonard Wood, New York; and by the resignation of Mrs. Frederic W. Upham, Chicago.

Wadsworth Retires

One of the oldest executives of the American Red Cross, Eliot Wadsworth, 67, retired yesterday from his post as vice chairman of the advisory committee of the national central committee after 27 years' service. He will continue as chairman of the Red Cross retirement board and will participate in other special projects, however.

Corporal Gyorgy Sandor Arouses Admiration At Concert of D. C. Recreation Department

By Ray C. B. Brown

D. C. Recreation Department, in collaboration with Recreation Services, presents the second "Entertainment, Please" concert in Central High School Auditorium on Wednesday night. Artists Corp. Gyorgy Sandor, USA pianist. Program of compositions by Bach Liest, Chopin, Rubinstein, Prokofiev and Falelhan.

Many vacant seats in Central High School Auditorium last evening could have been filled by auditors who would have enjoyed, at an expenditure of nothing more than their time, a striking piano recital by an artist in uniform, Corpl. Gyorgy Sandor, USA. His hearers, numbering only a few hundred, were enthusiastic in their apreciation of his performance, and with good reason, for he has qualities that arouse admiration. His technical equipment is prodigious, reminding one of Rosenthal's prowess in the old days, and with it goes a temperamental fire of a kind that starts conflagrations in audiences.

It so happened that I missed Corporal Sandor's recital a month ago in the National Gallery of Art, as I was on duty at the Ballet Theater and had to send an assistant. Good reports had reached me about his fleetness of fingers and his ardency at the keyboard, so I was prepared to a certain extent for his conquering way. That preparation, however, left room for surprise at his command of a surging dynamism and a strength of wrist that seemingly knows no weariness. His octave passages were things at which to marvel, and he is a master in the school of velocity.

I would like to hear him again in an auditorium without echoes, playing a piano that was not brittle in tone and unresponsive in lyricism. There were qualities of delicacy and rhythmic subtlety missing from his performance that I surmise are in his possession when he has the chance to display them. Perhaps, though, they are always overshadowed by his intensity and his devotion to technical expertise. Last evening I was most impressed by his stimulating attack and his ability to sway an audience by sheer feats of virtuosity.

His program started with two Bach numbers, one a chorale-prelude in the Busoni transcription and the other the Chromatic Fantasia and Fugue. These were followed by an unusual Liszt item, "Après une Lecture de Dante," which was done with the true romantic bravura. A Chopin group contained the G minor Ballade, two Etudes and the A flat major "Heroic" Polonaise.

An interesting novelty, played here for the first time, was an Aria and Fugue on the white keys by Anis Fuleihan, the Syrian-American composer, whose idiom is original and full of harmonic surprise. The balance of the recital consisted of a March by Prokofiev, Rubinstein's Staccato Etude in C major and two Liszt pieces: the F minor Etude—known either as "La Leggierezza" or "Caprice Poetique"—and the sixth Hungarian Rhapsody.

D. C. Choral Society to Sing 'Judas Maccabeus' Tuesday

First professional production of the Washington Choral Society will be Handel's "Judas Maccabaeus," which will be sung Tuesday evening in Constitution Hall, it was announced yesterday.

To be conducted by Louis Potter, the oratorio will be presented by four operatic stars and a special chorus of 150 District school pupils, augmenting the society's chorus of 150 members. Music will be by instrumental members of the choral group and National Symphony Orchestra players.

Called a "Song of Victory," the production will be heard by the largest audience ever to turn out for a Choral Society program. The large-scale presentation was planned in view of the success of previous programs in local churches including Washington Cathedral.

Paralleling the tragedy of the Jewish people today, "Judas Maccabaeus" tells of the Jewish hero's leadership of his people against oppression of their religion and liberties by the Syrian king, Antiochus Epiphanes. The scene is set in 160 B. C.

Soloists will be Marie Wilkins, Metropolitan soprano who won fame last year when she substituted at the last minute for Lily Pons in "Lakme;" Corp. Glenn Darwin, former Metropolitan baritone now stationed at Bolling Field; Mary Van Kirk, Metropolitan contralto, and Victor Laderoute, tenor for the Philadelphia Opera Co.

This will be the first Washington Choral Society production for which admission will be charged. Tickets are on sale at Snow Concert Bureau, 1108 G st. nw., and also at Constitution Hall on the evening of the performance. Seats will be priced at $2.65, $2.20, $1.65, $1.10 and 55 cents.

(Another chapter in the story, "Working for Victory on the Santa Fe")

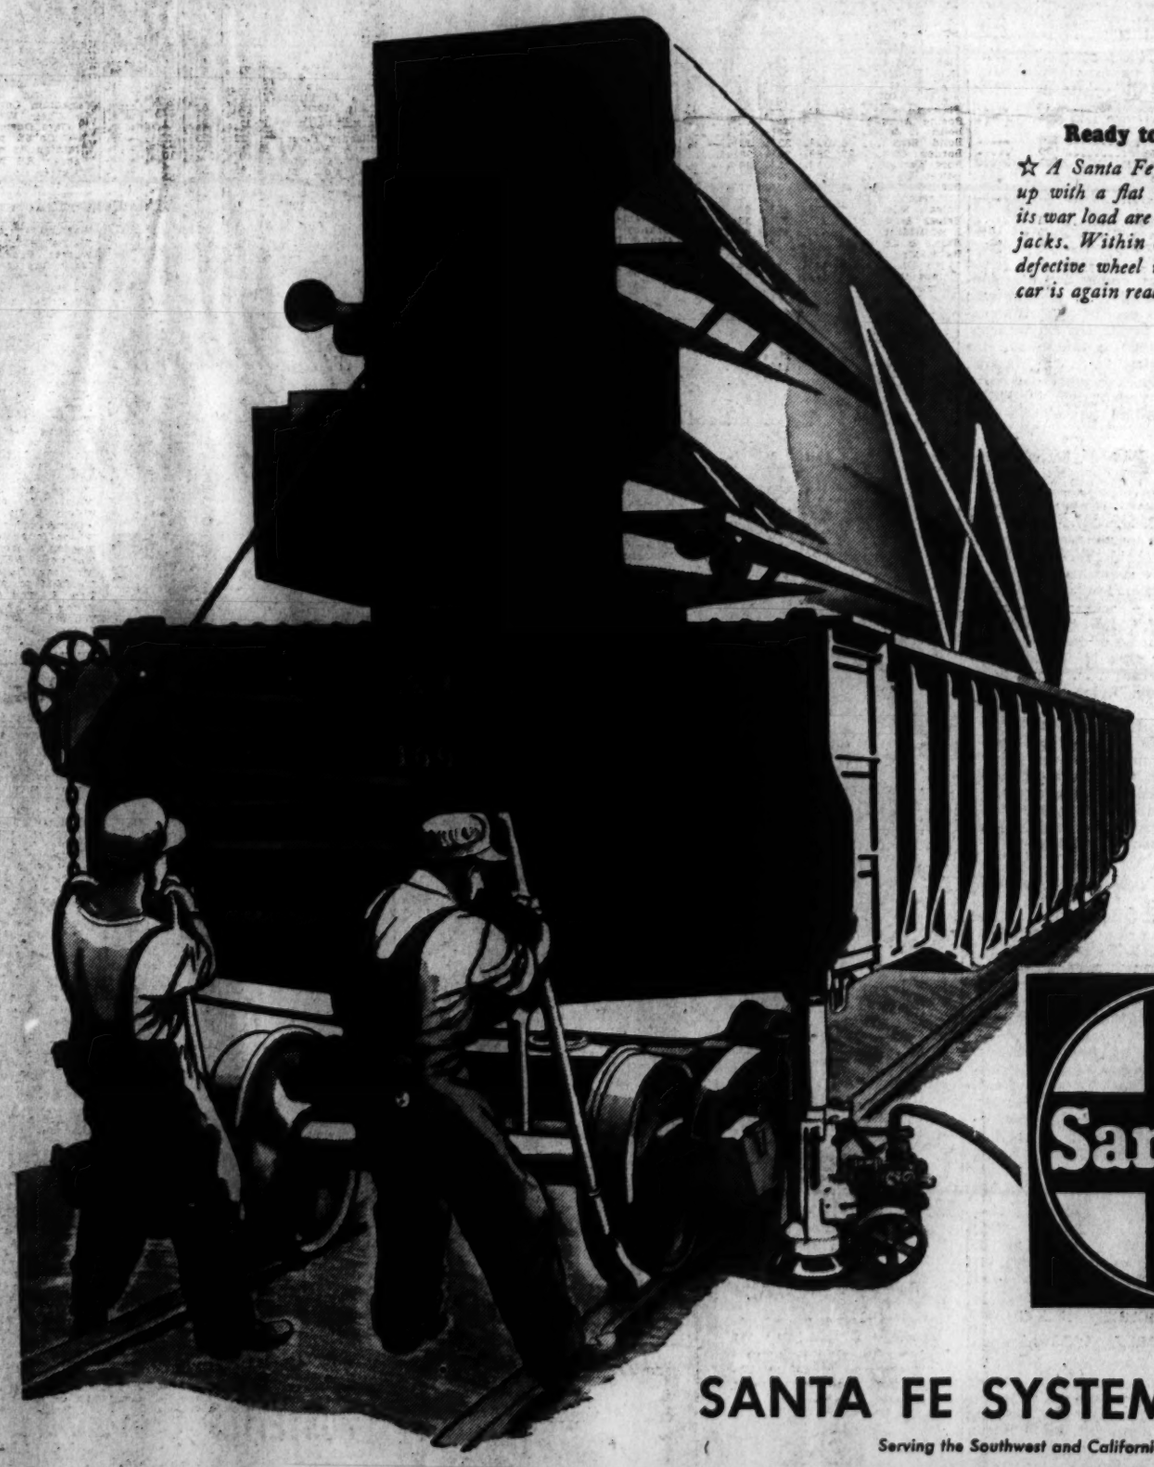
Fixing 'em on the Fly for Victory

How Santa Fe is Speeding up the Servicing Time of War-Vital Freight Cars

WAR can't wait. The load on a freight car might win a battle, and save the lives of thousands of our fighting men.

There's a battle-winning spirit in the way Santa Fe crews are keeping freight cars rolling these days. They are actually repairing loaded cars without unloading them!

When an inspector reports a flat wheel, a splintered side, or a shifted load on a Santa Fe freight car, the car is cut out of the train . . . fixed "on the fly" on a repair track . . . and then switched back on the same train, or the one immediately following.



Ready to Roll Again

The Marines Take Over an Island

In 'Guadalcanal Diary,' at Palace, Our Forces Win an Exciting Victory

"GUADALCANAL DIARY," the long-awaited Twentieth Century-Fox picturization of the best-seller by Richard Tregaskis, reaches the screen at Loew's Palace Theater this morning.

Alternately grim with the stark realities of front-line warfare and exhilarating in its free play of comedy, it is a picture that is likewise athrill with the indomitable courage of the Marines and aflame with the spirit of victory. Less a drama of personal exploits than a blanket tribute to the heroism of the United States Marine Corps wherever its fighting men may be assigned, there are still elements of warm human appeal in the story that gives it tremendous emotional impact, without the presence of any feminine player in the cast.

There is no "love interest" in the stirring events that comprise the narrative; just the brutal business of killing or being killed—always leavened by that agreeable recurrence of "comedy relief."

Except to the degree that victory is different from defeat, "Guadalcanal Diary" in most of its major aspects is the blood brother of "Wake Island," which should facilitate its immediate classification

Nervous and Eager Army

The action is initiated aboard the transports bearing a new army to an unknown destination. It is an army that is nervous, but not afraid.

The tension of a secret mission relieves itself early, in the deck pursuits and rough-and-ready badinage of a presumably typical cross-section of Marine personnel. There are the commanding officer, the hard-bitten sergeant, the kindly chaplain, the verbose and burly former taxidriver from Brooklyn, the young and untried captain, the youthful recruit, who seemingly should be in the front line of the schoolroom instead of the front line of battle, the seasoned veterans of other campaigns and the newcomers just out of "boot" camp.

The landing on the strangely deserted beaches of Guadalcanal is not long in coming. Then the contact with the enemy to snap the suspense, and from that point on a pseudo-factual condensation of the Marine campaign that turned the island over to the Army in a reasonable state of subjection.

Incidents of great valor, many that are deeply pathetic and others that are emotionally and dramatically forceful punctuate the whole length of the film.

Caution Goes by the Board

One of the most impressive scenes—and, in some quarters, most disputed—is in the flimsy dugout under heavy Jap bombing, when the taximan from Flatbush is moved to a few philosophical observations which he interprets as the nearest to a prayer he can manage at the moment. His audible thoughts are given a devout "amen" by all of the assembled band, including the understanding Father Donnelly and the Bessemer-steel Sergt. Hook Malone.

There are other episodes that seem not quite so authentic. The beach landings and attacks in close formation, for example, with no thought of dispersal or affording the enemy the hardest possible target, and the landing forces' complete indifference to the hazards of booby traps and other destructive devices of a wily enemy.

The boys rush in to a hastily deserted camp, gobble the still simmering food, sample the wines and liquors, in utter oblivion to possible poison, and grab up all manner of things that might prove triggers to deadly mines, grenades or ammunition caches. Very brave, perhaps, but also a little disquieting.

Splendidly Chosen Cast

Twentieth Century has been judicious in its casting of the principal roles. Chief interest centers in Sergeant Hook, Father Donnelly, Taxi Potts, Captain Davis and youthful Johnny Anderson, the characters so efficiently and constrastingly played by Lloyd Nolan, Preston Foster, William Bendix, Richard Conte and the unusually capable Richard Jaeckel. Each is snugly fitted by the part assigned him.

Leading the uniformly competent support are such as Minor Watson, as the colonel; Anthony Quinn, Roy Roberts, former leading man of the National Theater Players, as was Minor Watson, too, for that matter; Lionel Stander, Ralph Byrd, Eddie Acuff and Jack Luden.

Lewis Seiler's direction of Lamar Trotti's spirited script of the Tregaskis book is vigorous and nicely varied in pace.

A musical miniature, "Ode to Victory"; "The Butcher of Seville," a cartoon, and "Chief Neeley Reports to the Nation," feature of the theaters' recruiting drive for the WAVES, also will be found on the new bill to supplement a feature that would be given more impressive had it not been overtaken by the first newsreel shots of the more desperate battling on Tarawa.

LLOYD NOLAN

as he appears in the role of Hook Malone, the tough but kindly Marine sergeant, in "Guadalcanal Diary," opening this morning on the screen at Loew's Palace Theater. Adapted from the Richard Tregaskis book, this Twentieth Century-Fox production includes Preston Foster, William Bendix, Richard Jaeckel, Anthony Quinn, Minor Watson and many other sterling players in its all-male cast

LEONARD LYONS

Broadway Potpourri

New York, Dec. 8.—Emil Ludwig went to see the anti-Nazi play, "Tomorrow the World." He suddenly was called away, at the end of the second act, to rush to Washington . . . He went to the cloakroom to get his hat and coat. "I can't go down for your hat and coat now," said the attendant. "Why don't you wait for the end of the show? You can't get it now, at intermission" . . . "Are you trying to give me orders," said Ludwig, "here, in a theater where there's a play about Liberty?" . . . "Mister," replied the attendant, as he went to get the hat and coat, "Liberty is for a play, but not for Intermission."

EMIL LUDWIG

Ambassador W. Averill Harriman, now working in Moscow, has been seeing Maxim Litvinoff, the recent Ambassador from Moscow to Washington . . .They first met during the Beaverbrook-Harriman mission to Russia, before our entry into the war. At the official dinner to the visitors, Molotov sat near the head of the table. Litvinoff was seated far away, with the minor British and American aides. When the toasts were offered, Harriman announced: "Mr. Litvinoff, since you speak both English and Russian, will you do us the honor of translating my toast?" He then led Litvinoff to the head of the table—a diplomatic indication that the U.S. Government looked with favor upon him. Litvinoff's appointment as Ambassador to Washington was assured.

Henry J. Kaiser submitted to a joint Army and Navy board the plans for a new type of airship which has a cruising range of 2000 miles. All 14 members of the joint board turned it down . . . "They turned it down unanimously?" one of Kaiser's friends asked. "Doesn't that mean a lot of trouble for you?" . . . "No, I'll forget it," replied Kaiser. "It's when they're divided—when half wants it and the other half doesn't, and they fight about it—THAT'S when I'm in trouble."

On the day Italy surrendered, the Nazis tried to halt any celebrations by the Dutch by forbidding any flags to be displayed. But the Dutch nevertheless had their celebration. Throughout Holland, from windows, on sidewalks, lawns and rooftops, empty flagpoles suddenly sprouted . . . A man who owns 30 per cent of A. C. Blumenthal's cafe in Mexico City, Ciro's, receives $1500 a month for his $6000 investment . . . Jan Masaryk describes the governments in exile, who are dependent upon the aid of the four Allied powers, as "the Beggars' Opera."

The late Max Reinhardt's most ambitious production—bigger than "The Miracle"—was "The Eternal Road," a play by Franz Werfel. Never before did any production encounter so many obstacles. The theater which housed the show had to be rebuilt. Production was delayed for two years because of financial problems. Children who were hired for some of the roles outgrew their parts by the time the play was ready . . . At the last performance, Reinhardt sent a wire of tribute to Meyer Weisgal, who had raised $500,000 for the show. And because the electricians had turned off the lights, forever, on this, the most magnificent production ever presented in America, Reinhardt's closing wire had to be read by the light of a pocket flashlight.

King George of Greece is taking no chances on the questionable future of the King business in the new free world which is being molded. His Majesty has heard the rumblings, the legislative debates on whether young men are dying for the purpose of restoring him to the throne . . . Recently, some friends visited the King at his retreat and noticed that he was busying himself in carpentry work—making a table, book stands and ash trays for his home. "Is this a new hobby for you, Your Majesty?" he was asked . . . "At the moment, carpentry may be a hobby with me," sighed the King. "But some day it may become a livelihood."

The Three Slate Brothers did a vaudeville turn in the top variety houses of the country. They were featured entertainers who rated high in the marquee billings. The war broke up their act. The two younger Slates were drafted. The over-age remaining one, Sid Slate, decided to carry on, alone . . . Civilian Sid Slate now is on his way overseas to entertain troops abroad. His soldier-brothers are in the Broadway hit, Moss Hart's Air Force show, "Winged Victory."

No Exercise for Raymond Walburn

Hollywood.—Raymond Walburn, who has been around Hollywood so many years he speaks with an accent, never took a tap of exercise in his life.

Constitutionally opposed to reckless expenditure of energy he has his pet methods for keeping fit, methods which would horrify a physical culture expert.

Walburn, who is presently basking in the reflected glory of bein movie parent to Dorothy Lamour, Betty Hutton, Mimi Chandler and Diana Lynn in Paramount's "And The Angels Sing," winces when gymnasiums are mentioned. He abhors setting-up exercises, brisk walks and deep breathing. Raymond says deep breathing is hard on his lungs.

Chameleons Certainly Fool You!

Hollywood, Calif., Dec. 8.—Everybody in Hollywood knows Schwab's Drug Store. It's a famous meeting place. You never can tell what star you're going to run into. Not long ago a soldier sitting at the counter having a soft drink, waiting for glamor girls to appear, started talking to a girl beside him. "I was told stars hang out here," he said. "I've seen a few," she replied. When she finished her soda, she left. He waited for another 20 minutes, leaned over to the man behind the counter, and said, "Gosh, how long do I have to wait to see a star?" The guy said, "What do you want for your money? You were talking to Lana Turner." "Don't kid me—Lana's a blondel" "Not this week she ain't."

Now comes word from Martin Schwab, a pharmacist's mate in the Navy, and he gives the details of Lieut. Franklin D. Roosevelt, jr.'s, bravery at Palermo. The story follows:

"While we were tied up to Lieutenant Roosevelt's ship, of which he's executive officer and which we had saved from sinking, due to a German bombing attack, and had towed into Palermo and were giving it light and power and helping pump water out of their hatches, a German bomber group came over. They dropped bombs on an ammunition train which in turn exploded, throwing all kinds of shrapnel and fragments onto our ship and that of Lieutenant Roosevelt.

"Franklin, jr., came over onto our ship and told me that the doctor, pharmacist's mate, and most of the crew had abandoned ship during the raid, and that one of his crew had been hit by shrapnel, had a broken leg. Wanted to know if I could come over and take care of him. 'Just a minute, sir,' I said, 'I'll get some splints and morphine syrettes.' Then seeing I had other patients there, he said, 'If you'll show me what to do, I'll bring him over to you.'

"I showed Lieutenant Roosevelt how to administer a morphine syrette. He went back to his ship, gave the patient the morphine, and carried him back to us. This showed the greatest courage, because he carried the patient across a very dark gangway in the midst of shrapnel bombs, flares, and anti-aircraft fire. The man he brought over was Coxswain Nunzio Cammaratta, one of the bravest men I've ever met, with the true American spirit. He had absolutely no self-pity, was suffering great pain, kept saying, 'I don't mind if I lose my leg, but I do hope you can save my life.' His main thought was how his buddy was getting along. Next day he was transferred to another ship and got doctor's attention. I hear Sailor Cammaratta is getting along okay in the States. I hope he'll be happy, even though one of his legs is gone."

Maj. Jack Morgan, whose book "Man of Two Worlds" was made into a picture—after which he opened up one of our best eating places, the Cock 'n' Bull—writes from the Eastern Front: "I think you'd be interested in some of our pals who're doing a grand job.

"Bob Hope, Jack Benny, Al Jolson, and their traveling companions brought laughter to homesick boys.

Washington Merry-Go-Round

By Drew Pearson

SECRETARY OF THE NAVY Knox heard some blistering comments on the Navy's handling of war news at a closed-door pow-wow with the House Appropriations Committee recently. Plain-talking Representative Harry Sheppard of California, who presided at the meeting, raised Cain about the suppression of legitimate war stories as well as unwarranted delays in the clearance of news releases.

Sheppard asserted that the best way to make sure the public did not believe the lies of Axis propagandists was for the Government to give them more facts about combat developments. The American public can take it, Sheppard said—the bad news with the good. He also sharply criticized the withholding of stories from the battle fronts for long periods before their release is officially approved by Navy censors. It was brought out that some news dispatches had been held up for six months and more before being released.

"The public is entitled to know what's going on, both on the battle and the production front," said Sheppard. "For that matter, the Navy itself stands to benefit by a more liberal and intelligent public-relations policy. I have no doubt that many stories have been censored which would reflect great credit on the splendid job the Navy is doing in this war."

Knox Dislikes Sensorship

KNOX DIDN'T ATTEMPT to defend Navy censorship. He readily admitted that there was "plenty of room for improvement," but said he had argued with Navy brass hats until he was blue in the face about the suppression of war news, with little success.

"I'm a newspaper man," he said, "and therefore am a firm believer in giving the public the facts."

He also agreed that the Navy would profit by a more above-board news policy, citing as an example the insignificant notices the Navy had received in reports of the fighting on New Guinea. Admiral Halsey had shone brilliantly in these operations, Knox declared, but was barely mentioned in Army dispatches from Gen. Douglas MacArthur's headquarters.

The Navy Secretary didn't directly charge that MacArthur was trying to hog the credit for victories in the South Pacific, but he left little doubt in the minds of the committee that this was what he meant.

His branch of the service was perhaps "too modest," Knox remarked. He promised the committee that he would make a personal investigation to determine what reforms could be made to improve the Navy's press-relations set-up.

Operating Without Roosevelt

The difficulty of carrying on executive functions while the President is out of the United States was illustrated vividly during the Cairo conference.

Assistant President Jimmy Byrnes and other White House advisers felt it was necessary for the Army to take over certain leather factories working on Government orders, but under the law they had to have a presidential order. So they cabled the President.

FDR cabled back promptly, giving them the order. However, Maurice Latta, executive clerk of the White House, refused to accept it. He declared that, under the law, he had to have the President's signature. A cabled order was no good. Anyone might be able to forge a cablegram, Latta said, but nobody could successfully forge the President's signature. So seizure of the leather factories was held up until a written order was rushed back by plane from Cairo.

Note—On the whole, it is remarkable how efficiently most executive matters are handled even when the public has no idea the President is out of the country.

Jesse James' Friends

REPRESENTATIVE FRANK BOYKIN of Alabama, proud possessor of the spurs Jesse James wore when he died, may not know that across the aisle, on the Republican side of the House chamber, sits a man who is distantly related to the famous Missouri character. He is red-headed Representative William C. Cole of Missouri. Cole's grandfather was a second cousin of Jesse James' mother.

Not long ago, Cole was approached by a cattleman at a livestock meeting at Columbia, Mo. The stranger said he was from Clay County, Mo., where Jesse James lived.

"Is it true that you are a relative of Jesse James?" he asked Cole.

"A very remote relative," replied the Congressman.

"Well, it's nothing to be ashamed of," said the cattleman. "Folks in my section are right proud of Jesse. And we're glad we have a representative in Congress who has shown some of his fighting spirit."

'Rip Van Winkle' Is Accorded Notable Revival at Catholic U.

By Nelson B. Bell

As the second chronological sequence in its season of dramatic Americana, the Speech and Drama Department of Catholic University last night inaugurated a 10-day run of "Rip Van Winkle" in the campus playhouse that is fast becoming one of the commercial stage's most important tributary theaters.

The play which, in one acting version or another, has engaged the affectionate interest of American audiences for almost a century, and served as the keystone of the distinguished career of the late Joseph Jefferson, last evening was given a vibrant, sympathetic and thoroughly amusing performance by a letter-perfect cast of splendid selection.

It is the Dion Boucicault-Joseph Jefferson script that has been adapted to the present uses of the C. U. players, augmented by the interpolation of Walter Kerr's eloquent and pithy scene in the mountains, where the Gnomes supplement the hearty flagons of ale with humorously philosophical observations as the vagabond Rip embarks upon his sleep that lasted 20 years and worked the eventual undoing of the usurious Derrick Von Beekman and rescued the Van Winkle womenfolk from his abusive wrath.

Strikes Perfect Balance

Thus combining a full measure of the fantasy of Washington Irving's original with the fundamental virtues and vices that formed the basis of all native drama in the middle 1800's, the current production affords the revered play as complete and perfectly balanced an exposition as has ever graced a local stage.

It is being presented, furthermore, with the advantages of expanded stage space, to which Ralph Brown has brought perspectives and skillful lighting that give the work dimensions commensurate with the honored place it occupies in the library of the theater.

The story of the lovable wastrel and bibbler, who almost let a fortune slip through fingers too busy with the bottle, but still was shrewd enough not to play into the grasping hands of the unscrupulous Von Beekman, is one of alternate mirth and gentleness, legend and reality, fantasy and melodrama, that demands a bit of playing. Its variant moods were nicely encompassed last night—not without flaw, but with a sufficiently well sustained balance to make negligible such occasional defects as betrayed themselves.

Principals Score Decisively

In the title role, Dick Sykes has a considerable chore on his hands and executes it more effectively in the periods of the roistering young Rip than in the final passages, when he returns to the village, bewildered and unrecognized. The lack of conviction here, however, one feels tempted to say is due more to faulty makeup—that prodigious and beautifully waved white beard is unbelievable—than to character portrayal. As Gretchen, the shrewish wife, who later suffered all she had inflicted upon her husband, Sally Moorman contrives a degree of contrast that is both sound and striking. Theodore Hirsch's Von Beekman is a villain drawn in broad, black strokes that could do with a shade of softening in the final scenes.

Vincent Walsh and Marie Louise Walsh lend force to the adult roles of Hendrick Vedder and Meenie Van Winkle to a degree that is accurately forecast by the precocity of Tommy Shields and Maureen Lane in the same parts as children. The lesser roles are performed in fine consonance with the spirit of the play.

Rip's famous toast, "To your health, and your family's; may they live long and prosper," is one that Washington might appropriately drink to the University Theater and its enrollment.

Cooper Rides Dynamite Truck

Hollywood.—Gary Cooper rode in a heavily loaded truck which bounced and jounced all over a rocky mountain road on the way to the day's filming location of Paramount's "For Whom the Bell Tolls" in the high Sierras.

At the end of the road the driver began transferring case after case from the truck to the backs of horses for the remainder of the trip up the steep mountainside and Cooper learned that he had been riding with several hundred pounds of dynamite to be used for the bridge-blowing sequence.

Having been on such friendly terms with the 150-pound cases of explosives so far, Cooper decided to accompany the load the rest of the way. So he mounted a horse and led the dynamite pack train on the steep ascent.

Early Call Is Dancers' Worry

Hollywood—Facing the cameras for the first time the petite Kraft sisters, Evelyne and Beatrice, who dance in the Technicolor picture, "Kismet," confessed that they had not been worried about "camera fright."

"We just worried about getting up in the morning," Evelyne said. "We had a 7 o'clock call which meant we had to get up at 4:30 a. m. And that's the time we'd be getting to bed in New York. Show business is certainly topsy-turvy in Hollywood."

Hens, Dogs, Planes Delay 'Dragon Seed'

Hollywood—Filming of "Dragon Seed," one of M-G-M's most elaborate productions of the season, got under way at Calabasas—but not without the traditional first-day headaches.

All went well until the rehearsals of Walter Huston and Aline MacMahon were completed and the set was ready for the first shot. At the moment Director Jack Conway ordered the first scene filmed, a group of hens used as background for the scene exercised their feminine prerogative and decided they would have the last words—or cackles. Several roosters and ducks had to be substituted.

Then Hobo, a pooch in the film, tried to improve his role by darting after the ducks.

A squadron of P-38 fighter planes next decided to choose the sky over the location spot to stage a mock dog fight. Later, several flying fortresses joined in the maneuvers.

Despite first day's grief, however, the initial scene of the picture was completed satisfactorily by 10:30 a. m. as the company settled down to several months' work.

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

Washington is a good football town, thanks to the Redskins. The city is very fond of its Redskins. The players are heroes. The Capital has taken into its hearts the strapping young men from Ogden, Utah, and Belmond, Iowa, and Spokane and Toledo and Sweetwater, Tex. On the field and on the streets they are acclaimed by people of the city. Small boys worship them.

POVICH

It was astounding news that George Marshall, president of the Redskins, had asked the police of Washington to investigate his players. He went to the cops to ask them to keep the athletes under surveillance like so many suspects and report back to him if they were seen in the company of gamblers and in whisky-selling establishments.

He went to the police with no evidence to prove that his players were associating with gamblers, yet his very act put them all under suspicion. They learned of his actions virtually on the eve of their championship game with the Giants on Sunday. In a week when the players' frame of mind was most important to the title game and to Redskin fans, they learn that Marshall has gone to the cops about them, no less.

Perhaps that was an attempt by Marshall to undo his actions when he later announced: "Anyone who says any Redskin player has been betting on professional football games is a liar. I am willing to pay $5000 in cash for proof. That's how much confidence I have in my players."

That, certainly, is a high-sounding statement of complete faith in his players. But, as the bard used to say, "You can't poison a man and then show good faith by pumping his stomach out." It was no great show of confidence in his players when Marshall went to the police originally.

Marshall had available all the investigating facilities of the National Football League, which prides itself on its methods of tracking down disturbing reports about its football players. Instead, he chose to make it a matter for the Washington police, exposing to police scrutiny the players the community had learned to admire and against whom he could bring no charges.

If there was distrust by Marshall of the league's investigators' ability to gain him the information he desired, and if it is a reasonable distrust, then the football league needs a Judge Landis. Landis is famed for his relentless investigations of gambling and he does not run to the police.

Wherever there is professional sports competition, there is gambling. Professional gamblers are always lying in wait to get in on "the good thing." They always aim to make theirs "the smart money." Certainly there was bound to be gossip of people "in the know," and certainly there are people ready to lend credence to rumors of "fix." The smart money is always willing to tempt the athletes. Pro football requires the good faith of the players, or it devolves into a nasty racket.

It's a new day in football betting anyway, when it matters not to the betting public whether you won or lost, but by how many points. That is a new evil that has insinuated itself into the game ever since pro football became a big-time sport. Bookies bargain for points in their betting, always with their bookmakers' arithmetic that gives them the edge.

The new era in football wagering has injected a cockeyed note into the game. It's a day when the point after touchdown can be more important than the touchdown itself, to the people who bet on points. You don't always win when your team wins. It's points that count. In an older and friendlier day, before points were the basis for betting, you won when your team won.

The gamblers don't always win. Particularly, the little, chiseling gamblers who don't have clientele enough to balance their books and thus be content with the traditional bookmakers' percentage. When they are hurt, they scream. It was their screaming that was heard, chiefly, in the rumors that players were betting on games.

Dutch Bergman, the Redskins' coach, in a splendid demonstration of loyalty to his players and faith in them, brushed off the rumors of gambling with the comment of "ridiculous." He wouldn't entertain the thought that his men were mixed up in it. He attributed the rumors to the gamblers who had guessed wrong, and were now wailing loudly. He didn't think it was a matter for the police. He would not place them in the position of being suspects. He had respect for his players.

On the Line

With CONSIDINE

New York, Dec. 8.—Ed Barrow, one of the grand old guys of baseball, is battling his way back to health by aggressive leaps and bounds at his suburban home and looking forward to the 1944 baseball season—whose success, he said today, will depend entirely on the father draft.

CONSIDINE

The 75-year-old head of the Yankees was mowed down by a heart ailment early in the last World Series. Before the series was over his condition was reported "critical." The newspaper shops began to dust off the long feature stories about Ed's richly successful baseball career, which has covered so many years that few now remember that he was the discoverer of Hans Wagner, as well as the developer of the most successful teams of the 20's, 30's and 40's.

"I'm getting out of this place in a week or ten days and taking Mrs. Barrow to Atlantic City," Ed grumped to us. "I've got that —— pleurisy in my leg, same as I had last summer, but I'll lick it at Atlantic City. The place always made me feel better."

Barrow believes that baseball will be a weekend game for the rest of the war. A year ago he believed the war would end in a few months. Now he thinks it will go all through next season, at least.

"But the crowds will continue to come on the weekends, if we have the right kind of players to operate with," he predicted. "It all depends on that father draft. If the draft takes fathers left and right, we're all going to be in bad shape. Real bad shape. But if it takes a father here and a father there, well, we'll get by.

"Whatever the Yanks will have to work with, they'll do all right. We've got the best manager in the world in Joe McCarthy. Some of you fellows didn't think so for a long time, but there never was any doubt in my mind."

The tough old guy has enjoyed one phase of his long confinement in the hospital and his home. He has heard from and been visited not only by nearly all of his old baseball cronies—from Judge Landis down—but also has had letters from boyhood pals whose names he hasn't heard in 60 years. He got a nice letter from a "kid who used to sell papers with me. Fellow's a millionaire paper manufacturer now."

But he's restless. In his hulking frame is stored up a half century of momentum and year-around action in the game that is his first love as well as his business. He spoke enthusiastically to us about the healing qualities of Atlantic City's sea air and therapeutic clinics. But it was plain to see that his main reason for going is to inspect the Yankees' 1944 spring training site.

He's incensed because the doctors make him lie down every now and then, after short walks around his home. Last week's winter baseball meeting was the first he had missed in 28 years, but he had what amounted to an open telephone line to the caucus rooms, where his competent understudy, George Weiss, represented the Yanks.

Ed's no military expert, but he has a good description of the progress of America's war might. "They caught us with our pants down," he epitomized, "but we've got one gallus up and we're poking the other arm into the other one."

Speaking of Barrow reminds us that one of his all-time favorite players reported recently to an Army clinic, at a United States port of embarkation, to receive the injections a man must have before venturing to a war theater.

The doctor charged his needles with smallpox, tetanus, typhus and typhoid serums, and jabbed same into the left bicep of the applicant's arm. The applicant took it philosophically, then rolled down his sleeve.

"That was a terrible waste of that stuff, Doc," the applicant said.

"Waste?"

"Yeah. You shot it into my left arm, and that arm has been dead for two years."

The doctor looked down nervously at the man's chart. Then he smiled with relief. The applicant was Lefty Gomez.

Eagles Top League in Ground Gains

Chicago, Dec. 8 (AP).—The reason the Phil-Pitt Eagles were so tough in the National Football League now comes to light. They were the hardest-punching bunch of ground-gainers in pro football in 1943.

The Pennsylvania combine—its opponents can say they were outrushed by two teams—rolled up 1730 yards on the ground in 10 games to nose out the Western champion Chicago Bears, who made but 1651 yards and thus lost out on the ball-carrying honors for the first time since 1938.

It was the 152 yards by rushing the Eagles compiled against Green Bay last Sunday that turned the trick. But don't think the Bears were pushovers, for all that.

Bears Top Total Offense

The Chicagoans easily sewed up the total offense title—yards by both rushing and passing—with a 4045 total, topping Green Bay's runnerup effort of 3351 by several gridiron lengths. The Bears did this with their second-place rushing quota plus a first-place chunk of yards by passing—2310. Green Bay again was the No. 2 team in this department, making its aerials good for 1909 yards.

Neither Washington nor New York, who have one more game to play this Sunday, can dispute those claims.

However, the Redskins can take the total defense crown if they yield no more than 197 yards to New York Sunday, for a date their foes have gone only 2065 yards by passing and rushing, an average of 229.4. Otherwise the Bears will win the total defense laurels with their final mark of 2262 yards.

The Chicagoans also have the pass defense title in hand with 98 yards allowed per game on aerials, and Washington would have to limit New York to 53 yards passing to beat that effort.

New York Second Best

The Phil-Pitt club took undisputed rushing-defense honors, however, holding its foes to 79.3 yards each on the ground. New York currently is second best in this respect with a 106.1 average.

No one will argue the Bears' right to the title of most-penalized team for they were set back 748 yards during their 10-game campaign.

The leaders:

Total yards gained per game—Chicago Bears 404.5; Green Bay 335.1.

Yards rushing per game—Phil-Pitt 173; Chicago Bears 165.1.

Per cent of passes completed—Washington .545; Chicago Bears .511.

Macricostas Wins From Brutal Leone On Disqualification

George Macricostas won the feature wrestling match before 800 fans at Turner's Arena last night when Referee Tiny Bouque disqualified Michele Leone after 33 minutes of horrific conduct. Leone, one of the more wonderful villains, was so unabashedly naughty that even the arbiter finally caught on and chased the Italian to the showers—an appropriate spot for wrestlers.

From the outset Leone was determined to be a meanie and he slugged, strangled, stomped and gouged the Greek until the patrons were ripe for a lynching. Several of the more impressionable fans even beat Leone futilely with newspapers whenever a surreptitious swipe seemed feasible.

The Yellow Mask won the show's piece de resistance when the umpire stopped the brawl after Dr. John Bonica got himself trapped in a gruesome-looking double leglock known as the octopus hold. Referee Tiny Bouque had the choice of giving the verdict to Mr. Mask or carting Bonica's legs away in separate pieces.

Billy Bartush defeated Henry Piers after a brisk 21½ minutes with a crotch hold, body bend and press after a rough match. Genial Frank Bronowicz won over Cliff Olson while the Swede was outside the ring trying to detect the smart Joe who had twisted his leg while his back was turned.

Jimmy Britt and Chief Bamba Tabu drew in the opener.

Dan Reeves Now Sole Owner Of Cleveland Ram Eleven

Cleveland, Dec. 8 (AP).—Daniel F. Reeves, 31-year-old Army captain stationed at the Rome (N. Y.) Air Depot, has become sole owner of the Cleveland Rams football team, the club announced tonight.

Charles F. (Chile) Walsh, vice president of the National League club, said Reeves became sole owner by purchasing the one-third interest held by Lieut. Col. Fred Levy, Jr., commanding officer of the Air Forces' Suppl- Depot at Memphis, Tenn. Reeves and Levy purchased the team in June, 1941. They decided last spring to suspend playing activities for 1943, but informed the league recently of their intention of resuming play next fall.

The transaction took place at a recent meeting in New York and was approved today by the league's Commissioner Elmer F. Layden and its executive committee. Reeves in civilian life is a New York City investment banker. He entered the Air Forces in September, 1942, as a second lieutenant. Levy is from New York City and Louisville, Ky.

Giants in Good Shape for Sunday's Game

In contrast to the Redskins, who could have placed only four members of the starting line-up on the field had Sunday's New York Giant game been scheduled for yesterday, the Giants ironically came out of last Sunday's game without an injury more serious than a slight bruise on Len Shaffer's ankle.

Shaffer, the blocking back in his ninth year with the Giants, will be in top shape by the end of the week, however, according to reports from New York and Coach Steve Owen will start the same team that beat the Redskins, 14-10, last week and keep alive the Giant hopes of a playoff for the Eastern championship.

First Stringers Rest

Redskin Coach Dutch Bergman, who has switched the daily practices from twilight to morning for the remainder of the season, rested his first stringers yesterday and after movies of the Giant game only 14 of the reserves worked out. Several of the regulars took a turn around Griffith Stadium to limber up.

Bob Seymour said X-ray reports disclosed torn ligaments in his right knee and a slight chip of the knee bone, which will greatly handicap him Sunday, provided he is even in condition to play. With Seymour and Wilbur Moore out of the backfield at the same time, the 'Skins will be in sad shape.

Bergman, who showed pictures in the privacy of the visiting team's dressing room, had little comment after the showing, but from his manner he was very much displeased, particularly over the way Bill Paschal and Ward Cuff made their way through the Redskin line.

Will Throw Passes, Too

Paschal, who picked up 188 yards and two touchdowns against the Redskins in the biggest day of the season in the ball-carrying department, will add deception to his repertoire next week as the Geergia Tech rookie was throwing forward passes in yesterday morning's Polo Grounds drill.

The Redskins expect passes from Paschal, Emery Nix and Tuffy Leemans in Sunday's game, lots of passes, as the Giants cannot hope to run through the Redskin line for 270 yards as they did last week when they won although gaining only 7 yards through the air.

Redskins Deny Betting On Any League Games

session at Griffith Stadium, Bergman said "the entire thing is silly, absurd and ridiculous and I see no point in my discussing it with the players. The two-bit gamblers, the low-class element that associates with every professional sport has apparently been losing and they are trying to pin their losses on the players. You never hear from gamblers when they are winning.

Players Give Their Best

"Never by word or action in my association with this team have I had any reason to doubt the integrity of any player. Everyone of them has given his very best every minute."

Bob Masterson, veteran captain of the Redskins, was reached at his Arlington (Va.) home where he is confined with a heavy cold. As spokesman for the players, Masterson said "I have never known of any gambling on football by any member of our team, and I don't believe a word of it. We don't have the gambling type on our club. Why, we haven't even got a horse player with us this year and it's tough even getting up a gin rummy game on the trips. I can't understand the rumors and I firmly believe they are not true. I know every fellow on that team pretty well, some of the new ones not as close as the veterans, but I'll stand by every one of them."

Elmer Layden, pro football commissioner, will be here Saturday in order to officiate at the flip of a coin naming the site for the Eastern Championship playoff game should the Giants win Sunday's game. Layden has had a reservation at the Willard Hotel for several days. It has been reported that Layden was coming here for an investigation.

Facts Distorted Says League Official

Chicago, Dec. 8 (AP).—George Strickler, National Football League public relations director, denied today that any "special investigation" was in progress concerning rumors that league players were associating with gamblers.

He added that the Washington Times-Herald, which published a story of such probe, had "misrepresented" its information to the league commissioner, Elmer Layden, and had "misquoted" Layden.

He said, however, that the league constantly makes investigations of any rumors as a matter of course and that rumors of an alleged player-gambler tie-up had been heard by league headquarters.

"An investigation was made long before the recent Bear-Redskins game, and as far as I know it is closed," Strickler said. "It turned up absolutely nothing. There has never been the slightest bit of factual evidence to substantiate such charges.

Anderson Defends Players

"The majority of fans have become so Redskin, Packer and Bear conscious during recent seasons, they overlooked the fact that the league was balanced better in 1943 than at any time in the last 12 years.

"Six of the eight teams opened the campaign believing they had a chance to make the playoff. Couple these facts with a wrong guess on one game, mix in three highballs and you have a rumor. A rumor twice removed from its cource becomes a 'fact.'"

"Hunk" Anderson, cocoach of the Chicago Bears, observed:

"I'd like to get some of these rumor boys in a game or even get them to sit on the bench with me so they could hear those guys jar each other out on the field. They could see the fellows come out of the game all battered to hell. Then let 'em say the game was fixed.

"I saw the Giants play Washington in New York Sunday. It was such a viciously fought game that anybody would be crazy to say it was set up. Officials told me afterwards that it was one of the toughest games they worked all year."

Keith Harder Of D. C. Leads Va. Scoring

Charlottesville, Va., Dec. 8 (AP).—Capt. Bill Pickett of the University of Virginia cagers and Keith Harder, a freshman flash from Washington Tech High, each have notched 26 points in Virginia's first two court contests.

Harder scored 23 points last night as the Cavaliers downed the Fort Belvior Engineers, 47 to 34, to pull even with Pickett. The Virginia captain scored 15 in Virginia's 30-21 defeat of Woodrow Wilson Hospital's Army cagers last week and 11 more last night.

A whirlwind of baskets by Coughlin and Devic of the Fort Meade 100th General Hospital Group, in the second half defeated the Gallaudet College basketball team last night, 60-42.

The Blues led 26 to 19 at the half, but Coughlin and Devic were warmed up by then. The former scored 22 points in the second half and Devic scored 14. Coughlin, former star of St. Joseph's College, Philadelphia, was easily the outstanding man on the floor, with Roy Holcomb carrying most of the scoring load for the Blues.

Ga. Tech Squad Begins Workouts For Tulsa Game

Atlanta, Dec. 8 (AP).—Coach W. A. Alexander called up his Georgia Tech football squad today—and No. 1 item on the agenda was: "How to stop Tulsa's 4-F Hurricane?"

Idle since November 27, when they beat Georgia, 48-0, the Engineers were expected to start preparations for their Sugar Bowl engagement with a light workout and some preliminary study of known Tulsa formations.

Tulsa's coach, Henry Franka, scouted Tech in its final game. Tech did not scout Tulsa because the latter's Bowl invitation was accepted after Tulsa's final game.

Tech's line was expected to get particularly emphatic drills against running plays, built around Tulsa's ace, Clyde Le Force. Offensively, Tech's blue chips will be on Eddie Prokop, No. 2 ground-gainer of the Nation and this year's ablest passer in the South.

It marks Tulsa's second successive appearance in the New Orleans classic. Last year the Hurricanes dropped a 14-7 decision to Tennessee.

Roman Boy Takes Top Race of Day

By Walter Haight

Charles Town, W. Va., Dec. 8.—Jockey Carson Kirk of Silver Spring broke out in another rash of winners here this afternoon and increased his lead as the riding champion of the 18-day meeting here. Kirk's stellar performances included a smashing victory with Mrs. J. A. Fitzgerald's Roman Boy in a sizzling sprint, the best offering on the eight-race program.

In addition to Roman Boy, he booted home Merrie Shot, Miss Beeville and Wise Timmie.

Roman Boy finished a length and a half in front Dr. G. T. Strother's Marc d'Esprit with Mrs. Alice Gorga's Try Flying third in the test of about 4½ furlongs.

Roman Boy, now a 7-year-old, equalled the track record of 0:49, joining Irene's Bob and Honeymaid. The track was fast and a crowd of 4000 saw the Kirk-dominated program. Roman Boy was a $4.20 favorite.

Booted All the Way

The field was away in good fashion and Roman Boy, from the No. 1 post position, went right to the top. Kirk kept booting him all the way and he was not in serious danger at any stage. Mar d'Esprit, ridden by Jockey Woodrow Kirk, was off poorly and came boldly in the final stages. Try Flying, a son of Flying Heels and a horse who has had Roman Boy's number in other years, pressed the pace today and was tiring gradually at the end.

Carson Kirk failed the favorite players in the first race, getting Pilot Boat off very poorly. The son of High Quest managed to finish second, however, to C. P. Sowers' Madri Gras. The winner paid $4.80. Kirk did better in the second event and won with R. K. Schwartz's Merrie Shot and this winner also paid $4.80. Those who had this combination in the daily double received $22.20.

Kirk came back in the second, however, to bring in Merrie Shot ahead of Eight and Six and Real Boy.

Scocca Brings in Long Shot

Jockey Danny Scocca came from behind to hang a nose defeat on Mrs. Esther Warren's Leo Lorraine in the third race. Good Yield was third. Kirk was aboard Omastone, a long shot who finished fourth in a blanket photo finish. Scocca's mount, E. L. Poston's White Easter paid $60.60.

In the fourth race, Kirk took the mount on S. B. Webb's Miss Beeville just before the horses came to the paddock and he rode the 5-year-old mare home to the tune of a $5.20 payoff. The race was the James Sager Pure... Dr. H. B. Langdon's True Pilate was second and C. W. Davis' Storminess, the favorite, was third.

Kirk then brought Roman Boy home ahead and then made his final saddle appearance of the day a successful one. He was aboard Dr. G. T. Strother's Wise Timmie and the veteran son of Wise Counsellor came along in the closing strides to take the chief money. Backers of this favorite took down $4.80.

Bears Again Beat Zollners, 53 to 46

Defiance, Ohio, Dec. 8.—The Washington Lichtman Bears won their fourth straight game and their second in a row over the Fort Wayne Zollners here tonight, 53-46.

With Isles and Clayton scoring 13 and 12 points, respectively, the Bears were holding a 22-18 advantage at half time and upped it to 35-25 at the third period. Jeanette was top scorer for the Zollners with 12. The Bears were without the services of their player-coach, "Tarzan" Cooper, who could not get away from his defense job in Philadelphia, and "Sunny" Woods, who returned to Camp Ellis.

Two D. C. Boys On Va. Military All-Star Team

Richmond, Va., Dec. 8 (AP).—Fork Union, with five representatives, Randolph-Macon Academy and Staunton Military, each with three players, monopolized positions on this year's All-State Military Academy Football Team selected by eight coaches for the Richmond News-Leader.

Due to two ties 13 gridders were named on the All-Star selection instead of the usual 11. Other spots were won by boys at Augusta Military and Hargrave Military.

Fullback James Sievert and Center Wayne Wriston of Fork Union each lacked only one vote of being selected unanimously and as a reward were selected cocaptains of the team.

Only four of the players are Virginians. The others hail from District of Columbia, Maryland, Kentucky, West Virginia, North Carolina, New York and Massachusetts.

There were no repeaters on this year's selection, which was picked by Daniel Baran, Benedictine; Harrison S. Dey, Staunton; Phil C. Brooks, Fishburne; Larry Weldon, Hargrave; Alex Waleski, Augusta; Earl P. Schubert, Massanutten; Les Fouts, Randolph-Macon, and C. Graham (Rosie) Thomas, jr., Fork Union.

Racing in England Enjoys Banner Season; Future Bright

London, Dec. 8 (AP).—Great Britain's 1943 racing season—shortest of the war—hit the finish line in a whirl of booming bloodstock prices that coincided with fears this home of the thoroughbred would face the competitive postwar period short of quality stock.

At the same time, the buying crowds at racing sales mirrored optimism for another banner season in 1944.

Women, making heavy inroads on yet another industry, fared so well on the track in 1943 that two of them may be the principal rivals for the 1944 classics. They are the Hon. Dorothy Paget, who has poured more money into racing than any other Briton on record, and Mrs. Betty Lavington, a newcomer.

Miss Paget, granddaughter of William C. Whitney, realized her two greatest ambitions by heading the 1943 list of winning owners and breeders and also winning the Derby.

Running 16 horses, Miss Paget's thoroughbreds won 26 races that enriched her stables at Elsenham, Essex, by $59,152. The total was cut in half by war-time reductions in purses.

Many two-year-olds were included among her winners and her Orestes is favored to win next season's Derby. Straight Deal gave Miss Paget her first Derby triumph.

Mrs. Lavington finished her inaugural season as an owner by winning nearly $14,000. For the coming campaign she has fair fame, best two-year-old filly of 1943, and the grey colt, Effervescence. The latter was purchased for $24,500 at a recent Newmarket sale—top price of the day.

Runnerup to Miss Paget among the winners was Lord Derby with $31,700. King George, with four horses carrying the royal sinks, won $10,000.

14 Form Cage Varsity Squad At Maryland

By the Associated Press

Coach Burton Shipley of the University of Maryland basketball team worked a selected 14-member varsity squad yesterday for its opening game at College Park Saturday night with the Quantico Marines.

The green outfit still has seven candidates battling for a first-string assignment, and the veteran coach plans hard scrimmage sessions for the remainder of the week.

Shipley has placed Jack Flynn, member of the 1942-43 freshman squad, and the New Jersey speedster Joe Acito at the forwards. Flynn is from Washington.

Big 6-foot-6-inch Gil Tauscher of Garrett Park, Md., and Ed Fennell of Rockville are alternating at center.

Two football players, Dick Tuschak from Detroit and Frank Doory of Baltimore are operating at guard, along with Ermy Englebert, a holdover, from Baltimore.

On the second team, forward duties have been taken over by Bill Greer, Bel Air; Chuck Ryan, Towanda, Pa., and Warren Hoffecker, Sparrows Point, Md., with the rugged Walt Kolondne of Washington at center. Tom Chisari, Washington; Fred Kishi, Amache, Colo., and Charles Hiden, Hyattsville, are competing for guard spots.

College All-Star Hockey Team Set For New Season

Undefeated in five years, Chet Adair's College All-Star hockey team is preparing for its sixth season with 16 players signed. Harry Harris, goalie, will be in the nets for the sixth year, while Dick Sherman, center, and Vic Bouton, wing, will be starting their fourth year. Buddy Adair of local tennis fame and son of the coach and manager also will be at wing for his sixth year, when Army duties permit.

Twelve players are newcomers and will be playing their first season here. With the field to himself, Adair visualizes increased interest this year. Several strong out-of-town teams have written for games on a schedule which is still in the making.

Any player interested in joining the team will be given a tryout by contacting Adair at Wisconsin 2537.

Charlie Bennett Signed to Meet Nick Latsios Here

Charley Bennett, Baltimore welterweight who turned in his second triumph over Eddie Kane Monday, yesterday was signed by matchmaker Gabe Menendez to meet Nick Latsios, Alexandria's Golden Greek, now a corporal at Bolling Field, in the cofeature eight-rounder of his card next Tuesday night at Turner's Arena.

Latsios is undefeated in 13 starts as a pro after winning several amateur titles. Bennett's victory was his second in three starts against Kane. Aaron Perry, fast rising young undefeated Negro lightweight, with six kayoes in eight starts, will box in the eight-round cofeature, meeting an opponent to be named.

For Outstanding Service

Boxers in Armed Services Awarded 1944 Neil Memorial

By Sid Feder

New York, Dec. 8 (AP).—The 4019 boxers who have traded in their ring trunks for uniforms in Uncle Sam's armed forces today were awarded the 1943 Edward J. Neil Memorial Plaque, given annually by the Boxing Writers Association of New York for outstanding service to the sport.

The trophy, established in memory of the Associated Press sports writer and war correspondent who was killed during the war in Spain in 1938, will be awarded in the name of the "fighting boxers" at the association's annual dinner January 19 and will be hung in their name in the lobby of Madison Square Garden.

This annual Neil trophy will be accepted by a committee of boxers representing every branch of the armed forces and is being awarded in the name of all boxers, past or present, living or dead, who served or are serving the United States.

18 Boxers Die in Action

Available records show 18 boxers have been killed in action; seven others have met accidental death since entering the military; nine are missing in action and some 40 have been wounded. About 500 are carrying on boxing and morale programs in camps in this country, at bases here and overseas and aboard the Navy's battleships.

In making the award to the group of 4019—and any more who may enter the service during the war—the boxing writers departed for the first time from the custom of giving the bronze plaque to an individual. Jack Dempsey won the first one, followed by Billy Conn, Henry Armstrong, Joe Louis, and, last year, Barney Ross. Four of these five now are wearing United States uniforms.

The decision to make the award to all boxers in the armed forces was reached after considerable discussion on individual candidates. Among these were former Middleweight Champion Fred Apostoli, who has been in five major engagements aboard a battleship; Benny Leonard, the Army's top boxing instructor in World War I and now doing the same think for men in the maritime service, and Nat Fleischer, publisher of Ring Magazine.

Vic Hanson, 40, Enters Army as Private

Syracuse, N. Y., Dec. 8 (AP).—Vic Hanson, from 1930 to 1936 head football coach at Syracuse University, where as an undergraduate he had been an all-American football and basketball player, entered the Army today as a private.

Hanson, married and the father of two children, is 40. He received permission from the Army Service Command to enlist and was sent to Camp Upton, Long Island.

Camilli Signed By Oakland Club

Oakland, Calif., Dec. 8 (AP).—Signing of Dolph Camilli, former major league baseball star, to a two-year contract to manage the Oakland Club, of the Pacific Coast League, was reported today by club president C. L. (Brick) Laws.

The deal by which the Oaks secured Camilli's release from the New York Giants, it was said, is subject to ratification by Judge K. M. Landis, high commissioner of baseball.

As part of the deal, the Oakland club gave the Giants an option to purchase the contract of Bill Rigney, shortstop now in the Navy, after the war.

FREE ENTERPRISE

THE OPPORTUNITY AND OBLIGATION TO COMPETE

WE can be prosperous beyond our dreams—all of us—workers, farmers, and business men—but one of the prerequisites is the self-discipline of accepting competition for ourselves as well as others.

● Free enterprise does not imply the freedom to use any or all means to make a profit. It does not mean the right to monopolize. It means the opportunity and obligation to compete.

● Competition requires independence of action, free access to the market, and no large degree of control over the price by any buyer or seller. In general, the larger the number of sellers and the more easily buyers can shift from one seller to another, the higher will be the degree of competition (and vice versa for buyers).

● But let us not get too academic or go off the deep end. We cannot have perfect competition. We cannot subdivide businesses and labor unions into tiny units to make a multitude of buyers and sellers in each market; we cannot reduce our rich variety of products to a few rigidly standardized items; we cannot educate people to judge quality precisely; we cannot eliminate the costs of bridging space between buyers and sellers. On the other hand, have we gone as far as is practical and desirable in these directions?

● We cannot even have a system of highly "sensitive" prices, that is, prices which fluctuate immediately in response to every minor change in demand and supply. This would occur in the dream world of competition-to-the-nth-degree. It cannot occur in the real world, or even in the ideal world of competition best suited to physical facts and human qualities. The economies of large-scale enterprise, the need for adapting products to human wants, the costs of transportation and the costs of issuing and acquiring market information put severe limits on price sensitivity.

● Economists tell us that if prices were extremely sensitive, business booms and depressions would be much less severe—provided our stock of money remained fairly constant. But with the somewhat limited degree of sensitivity which is practicable in the economy, price and wage changes cannot prevent severe declines in business activity. We cannot count on competition alone to cure depressions. We must look mainly to other kinds of measures to prevent mass unemployment of men and machines.

● If we cannot have prices which fluctuate with every small change in demand and supply conditions, we can work toward—and achieve, if we really want it—a system in which prices and wages are at least roughly responsive to long-run changes in demand and supply, a system in which most markets are not dominated by individual businesses, groups of businesses, labor unions, or farm organizations, and in which prices and wages are maintained at levels consistent with free access to markets and to jobs.

● In any kind of an economic system there must be some means of determining prices, wages, and profits, and of bringing labor and capital into employment in the industry and place where they are most needed. There are two ways to do this: by administrative fiat or by the impersonal processes of the market. The first of these is typical of the totalitarian state; it frequently involves destruction of individual freedom or fumbling mismanagement. During the war all of us have had some experience with patronizing and paternalistic treatment by the state; we have found out what it means to be pushed around by bureaucrats; and we have discovered that the political determination of prices, wages, and profits leads to chaos when self-interest supersedes the fine fever of patriotism—as it eventually does. I do not mean to imply that we can do without controls over prices, production, and distribution in time of war; but I do suggest that we can learn something from their operation. Even with a united national purpose these controls work badly when human abilities are inadequate for the superhuman task, when personal or departmental jealousies crop up among officials, and when pressure groups try to prey on the rest of the public. Every day more Americans are beginning to understand why our forefathers feared the caprice and tyranny of power.

● The impersonal processes of the market in determining prices and wages and in allocating productive resources will, in normal times, save us from the fumbling of bureaucrats and from the Babel of confusion, uncertainty, and annoyance produced by their regulations. But these market processes will not save us from paying toll to those who monopolize and restrict entry to markets or jobs.

● If we want an economy in which we are free to try out new ideas, develop new products, and introduce more efficient methods of production, if we want an economy in which there are great opportunities for men of imagination, inventiveness and energy, if we want an economy wide open to progress, then we must have a free field and fair competition for all comers—without collusion as to prices, markets, or production. This is the only basis on which we have a right to demand freedom from governmental regulation for ourselves and on which we can combat monopolistic tendencies in other quarters.

● Let us stand squarely for the principles of the anti-trust laws and against all collusion and combination in restraint of trade. Let us insist that the government review with a critical eye every combination and consolidation which might restrict competition. Let us face frankly the problems of economic power arising out of price leadership and encourage every honest effort to find means to deal with them. Let us not shrink from questions as to whether some great aggregations of plants are too large for efficiency, free entry into the industry, and a free price. While we resist the efforts of the Department of Justice to extend the anti-trust laws by far-fetched and distorted interpretation, and while we fight every attempt to use them as a tool of persecution, let us cooperate in sincere efforts to modernize these laws and extend them by specific legislation to monopolistic practices they cannot now reach. I do not have a simple formula for this, but I believe we must try to find one.

● We can then, better face the problem of the growing monopoly in labor which is threatening to make the free enterprise system unworkable. Today labor is going through a stage of empire building reminiscent in some ways of a similar stage in business three-quarters of a century ago. Witness the same buccaneering spirit, the same concentration on selfish interests, and the same disregard for the public welfare. Business leaders learned the hard way that the public will eventually rise up against those who prey upon them. Will our labor leaders be wiser? The right to collective bargaining to protect the weak position of the individual employee is one thing—but the grant of unlimited monopoly privilege to combine into a private government which can dictate its own terms to businesses, industries, communities, and even to the government itself, and which can start a wage-price spiral such as to hinder the war effort and make full prosperity impossible in time of peace is something quite different. We need to find a middle way which will prevent employers from exploiting employees but which does not sow the dragon's teeth. The exercise of arbitrary power by labor threatens not only business, but also all workers outside the unions and all those dependent on pensions and savings for their existence, and ultimately, of course, the well being of union workers themselves.

● The idea that the labor problem can be solved if great, powerful organizations of employers will sit down with great, powerful organizations of labor is a delusion. If our experience in the N.R.A. and in the war teaches us anything, it is that the best that can be expected in the long run from such a situation is an armed truce with intermittent civil war. And every truce would be a monopolistic arrangement to take advantage of those not members of the great organized groups. Business and labor unions, whenever confronted with postwar readjustments that are unfavorable to them, will be sorely tempted to protect their own special interests at the expense of the public. There will be efforts on the part of businesses, abetted by labor unions, to limit productive capacity, to raise tariffs, to obtain subsidies, and to maintain prices at artificially high levels. The unions will oppose labor saving changes and will seek higher wages even in areas and industries of surplus labor. Already demands are emerging for direct joint action by business, labor, and agriculture to solve the transition problems of special concern to them. While these groups should have every opportunity to register their own self-interest, we cannot entrust our fate to decisions made by pressure groups. If experience is any guide, such coalitions will be almost certain to restrict opportunities for progress and expansion, to exploit the public, and ultimately to injure even the businesses, workers, and farmers included in them. We cannot afford a postwar N.R.A. Resort to temporary government regulation in the transition from war to peace may, however, be necessary in cases of great hardship.

● We can be prosperous beyond our dreams—all of us—workers, farmers, and business men—but one of the prerequisites is the self-discipline of accepting competition for ourselves as well as others.

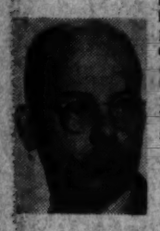
The Federal Diary

By Jerry Kluttz

Hundreds Sent Home Ill By Federal Agencies

The Public Health Service has ordered Federal agencies to send home employes who have the slightest bit of fever. Hundreds have been sent home within the past several days by doctors and nurses in the first-aid rooms. They've been warned to stay in bed at least 48 hours. In this way the health officials hope to avert a dreaded "flu" epidemic. Dr. Leon Schwartz, Commerce Department doctor, yesterday was handicapped in examining employes as two of his nurses were ill. He said he had sent home an unusually large number of employes since Friday. He advised the employes to force liquids, and stay in bed.



At the Pentagon, scores of employes have been sent home by Dr. Frederick Smith, the medical officer. However, Dr. Smith says the cold germs are mild and cause only a light infection even though they are widespread. The department's offices have been crippled with so many employes out, he said, but none of the employes he knew of had pneumonia and many who had been sent home Friday and Saturday reported for work yesterday. His best advice to the employes was: "Don't get panicky, the cold epidemic is nothing to get worried about." In contrast to the up-to-the-minute work of the Public Health Service, the medical division of the Civil Service Commission is sound asleep. However, the current cold epidemic probably will blast out the long-delayed health plan for Federal workers. It would be a scandal if a real epidemic did break out here, as Federal officials have been talking about a plan to protect the health of Government employes for months, and still they've done very little about it.

MOVING DAY: The British Admiralty is to take over the old Arlington Hotel building, which is occupied by the Social Security Board. The Navy will take over its space in the temporary building across Seventeenth st. from the Tidal Basin. Social Security will be moved to the Lenox Building in about half the space it had in the Arlington Hotel. . . . State Department will take over all the Walker-Johnson Building. . . . Foreign Economic Administration will get the space in the gas building that's being vacated by WPB. . . . Census has given up one wing of its building at Suitland, Md., to Navy's hydrographic office. The cooperation of Census Director J. C. Capt in providing space will prevent the necessity of putting up another building at Suitland for Navy.

The new chief investigator of the Ramspeck Civil Service investigating Committee is Col. Edward McCormack of the Smaller War Plants Corp. He has had much experience in private industry and Government and he should be ideally fitted for the job. The committee also decided to hold hearings soon on Army-Navy electronics. This agency has been under fire by the committee, so it hired some efficiency experts to iron out its administrative troubles. Several committee members insisted on holding open hearings on the Civil Service Commission's personnel loyalty exams. The commission, incidentally, has some powerful support within the committee on its methods of ferreting out Communists and Axis sympathizers. The committee, however, decided to delay action until after the Dies Committee makes up its mind on what it'll do.

The War Department yesterday honored 890,000 of its civilian employes. It was the first time in history that civilian employes have been honored by the department. At a mass meeting yesterday noon in Pentagon court, a token group of 17 employes were awarded emblems of civilian service by Personnel Director William Kushnick, who told the gathering of more than 10,000 people: "Failure here would mean failure at the battle-front . . . That civilians have not failed, but brilliantly succeeded, is shown in the success we are meeting overseas." Service ribbons were pinned on Elizabeth Eddes, John Baxter, Ernest Morris, Thomas Gwinn, Clate Low, Herbert Powell, Fred Cumley, William Reading, Morrison Perley, Wesley Gray, Agnes Hayes, Sarah Root, Louise Lelsberg, Eleanor Gessford, Farrell Sears, William Henderson and Stephanie Rakowski.

Emblems of meritorious service were presented to Sadie Er..estine Roberts who joined the department during World War I; Harry G. Brokering, Charles D. Sidney, a messenger in the office of the Surgeon General; Pauline Dorman, administrative assistant in the office of the Chief of Staff, and William P. Robinson who served for 44 years as a messenger in the Secretary's office. War Secretary Stimson presented the highest awards—the emblems for exceptional civilian service—to Daniel Dickey, who holds 13 patents that helped to develop plane propellers, and William Baumbeck whose engineering skill has solved many armament production problems. The Secretary commended the civilians for their work and their spirit. It was a good beginning and the civilians now know the brass hats appreciate the work they're doing, though the brass hats get the credit.

District Watershed Addition, 40 Miles Long, Being Planned

Construction of a retaining dam resulting in a 40-mile-long water supply shed for Washington in the Great Cacapon River near where it empties into the Potomac west of Berkeley Springs, W. Va., together with four flood control dams in the Potomac itself, extending from near Cumberland toward the District, at a cost of undetermined millions, is a postwar Government project, it was learned last night.

The community nearest to the proposed site for the retainer dam is Great Cacapon. The town, a small village, is high and would not be flooded, although it might be surrounded by the newly created backwater. Other hamlets along the Great Cacapon River, however, would be flooded and would have to be abandoned, according to the plans.

Largent, the Forks of the Cacapon, Capon Bridge, the latter on U. S. Route 50, would all be within the back-water which would extend to a point approximately 20 miles due west of Winchester, Va., on Route 50.

In selecting the location the Government is understood to have picked one of the least populated sections in the East. The country in which the water will be backed up is the north extremity of the historic and famous "Smoke Hole" region of West Virginia, one of the last spots in the East to be affected by civilization.

Just how the water would be piped to the District was not made known. It was indicated, however, that the line would closely follow West Virginia route 9 to Martinsburg and Charles Town and thence along Virginia State route 238 to a spot near Tyson's Corner and then into the District, a distance of approximately 100 miles over some of the highest mountain ranges in the East.

The work on the pipe-line, the retainer dam, the clearing of the area in which the water would be backed up and the removal and resettlement of hundreds of farm and mountain valley families would take a minimum of five years, it was understood, once the job was started.

Untold millions of gallons of clear mountain water daily would be afforded Washingtonians under the plan, engineers estimated. The plan is part of a postwar program that recognizes that Washington and vicinity will continue to grow.

More Data In Flu Cases Asked Here

While the Health Department asked more scrupulous reporting of influenza cases to afford officials a better idea of need for control, Federal agencies yesterday announced absenteeism from illness in some instances had doubled, but added that offices were not overly handicapped because the illness was of such short duration.

Meanwhile, Surgeon General Thomas Parran of the United States Public Health Service said the "mild type of influenza" apparently had started in the Great Lakes region and by the end of November had reached nearly all parts of the country except the Southwest, Mountain and Pacific States.

He said such epidemics are not unusual in the winter, and that there have been 17 of widespread scope since 1918. He reemphasized statements of local officials that the present siege is not severe and that there is "notable freedom from serious complications."

Cases Not Reported

Dr. James G. Cumming, chief of the Health Department's preventable disease section, said local doctors were so busy treating cases they were neglecting to report them under the law which requires notification within 24 hours. Letters were addressed yesterday to local medical societies urging better cooperation.

Figures being compiled by schools show a greater incidence of the disease among children than health officials had anticipated. There were 147 elementary school teachers and principals absent yesterday—134 the day before.

Health officials indicated further precautionary warnings would be issued in a day or two, if the siege does not abate, and said that meanwhile close touch is being kept with the city's large institutions.

Publice Health Service reported a general rise in total absences in Government departments during the last two weeks, but withheld figures pending complete compilations.

Twice As Many Sick

However, the War Department reported twice as many out sick as usual. Treasury had 10 to 15 per cent of its total force of 2400 on absent lists, according to Chief Medical Officer Roy Whitehead. The loans and currency division of Treasury, which numbers 1800 employes, had 238 absent yesterday.

The Civil Service Commission reported 20 a day being sent home from its emergency room, against a normal record of no one sent home in November.

Other agencies also reported jumps in absences, although Navy said there was no increase in absence among its service personnel.

On Capitol Hill, Dr. George W. Calver, Capitol physician, said scores, including many Senators and Representatives, have been treated this week.

Thirty came to his office Monday, 67 Tuesday, and more than 60 yesterday, he said. He has issued a bulletin to all offices advising personnel to avoid persons with colds, cover mouths carefully when coughing, and take all precautions at the first symptoms of a cold.

Very Rev. Dun Finally Accepts D. C. Episcopalian Bishopric

Acceptance of his election as fourth Bishop of Washington was announced yesterday by the Very Rev. Angus Dun, dean of the Episcopal Theological School at Cambridge, Mass.

DR. DUN

His acceptance was telephoned early yesterday morning to Dr. Franklin J. Bohanan, president of the Diocesan Standing Committee, diocesan ecclesiastical authority since the death of Bishop Jame E. Freeman last May.

Before Dr. Dun can be formally consecrated, his selection must receive the consent of a majority of the bishops and of the standing committees of all the dioceses in the Protestant Episcopal Church in America. But consent is virtually taken for granted, church leaders say.

The Right Rev. Henry St. George Tucker, presiding bishop of the Episcopal Church, will notify the Washington diocese when a sufficient number of "consents" have been received. Plan for a formal consecration, probably in the spring, will follow.

Dr. Dun reached his final decision Tuesday night or in the early hours of Wednesday morning, for late Tuesday afternoon he said that he was still deliberating.

D. C. Scouts to Begin Salvage Drive for Paper This Weekend

The all-out drive to reclaim waste paper from previously untapped sources will get under way in the District this weekend when Boy Scout troop and cub pack leaders in the National Capital Area Council will receive instruction bulletins from the D. C. Salvage Committee.

With details of the duration salvage program will be mailed leaflets no which troop masters may indicate their willingness to participate and designations of their collection depots. Accumulation points should be set up as soon as possible, salvage officials said.

The bulletin, which will enlist the services of all Washington area Scouts in solicitation and collection of newspapers, magazines, books and corrugated boxes, cites a "disastrous shortage" of waste paper throughout the country. It is estimated that 40 per cent of the salvage available in the District has heretofore been neglected.

According to official instructions, each troop is to set up in its headquarters a suitable place where paper collected by Scouts may be concentrated, sorted and bundled for collection by salvage committee trucks. Troops must appoint a salvage committee within their organization to supervise operation of the depot.

Other Scouts will be called upon to solicit given blocks in their area and will be equipped with copies of the salvage program for distribution among collection prospects. Salvage officials pointed out that Scouts should arrange their collection schedules to precede weekly Saturday pickups from the troop depot. Returns from the paper sales will be given to the Scout troops.

Penicillin to Be Made Available

Penicillin, the new wonder drug, will be on the commercial market by next summer providing the present rate of increased production is maintained, according to Robert D. Coghell, research chemist for the Department of Agriculture, who spoke yesterday before the Rotary Club at the Willard Hotel.

Coghell, who is chief of the Fermentation Division of the Northern Region and a world renowned authority on production of the mold from which penicillin is derived, said production of the drug had increased 100 per cent during the past year.

The number of cases being treated each month as compared with a year ago is an increase of several thousand, he said.

Coghell paid high tribute to the chemical industry for its part in increasing production. He said the industry has spent about 15 million dollars for the purchase of mold plants.

Emphasizing the difficulty of supplying the drug, Coghell said the plants purchased by the chemical industry, when working at full capacity, were only sufficient to produce between 5 and 7 pounds of penicillin a day. He said a weekly supply of between 500 and 600 pounds is necessary to supply world needs.

City News in Brief

Safecrackers entered the Tieman Paper Co., at 1113 M st. se., early yesterday and took $262 from the safe which they opened by knocking off the knob and punching out the combination. Solomon Ackerman, manager, told police the thieves entered by jimmying a front door.

Honor for Major Kelly

The Sentinel Club, composed of the Negro policemen and firemen of the District, will present a plaque to Maj. Edward J. Kelly at a testimonial ceremony today at 1:30 p. m. in the Detective Bureau squad room. The District Commissioners, the District attorney and several judges of the Municipal Court will be guests at the ceremony.

Talk on OPA Rules

Instructions on how to avoid OPA penalties will be given to women's wear store proprietors at 10 a. m. today at the OPA executive offices at 5601 Connecticut ave.

A large number of shop owners, including proprietors having stores on 14th, 7th, 8th, G, M, and N sts. nw., and H st. ne., have been summoned to the meeting. They will hear John L. Laskey, District OPA enforcement attorney, explain the regulations in detail.

Smoke Causes Woman's Death In Hotel Room

Smoke from a smoldering mattress in a room at the Shoreham Hotel caused the death early yesterday of Mrs. Belle Lee Ridenour, 41, wife of an Ohio newspaper publisher.

Mrs. Ridenour

Found unconscious on the floor of her smoke-filled room shortly after an unidentified person turned in an alarm she was given first aid by the Shoreham house physician, Dr. Harry Kauffman, and Dr. L. J. Steffan of Emergency Hospital. Efforts to revive her failed, and she was taken to Emergency Hospital, where she was pronounced dead on arrival.

Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald issued a death certificate of accidental asphyxiation following an autopsy. Police said the mattress was ignited by a cigarette.

Mrs. Ridenour, who had stayed at the Shoreham Hotel for the past two weeks, had been working in the press division of the Treasury Department. Her husband, C. F. Ridenour, is publisher of the Piqua Daily Call in Piqua, Ohio.

A graduate of Brenau College in Gainesville, Ga., and of Columbia University, Mrs. Ridenour was formerly advertising manager for department stores in Savannah, Atlanta and Miami.

Besides her husband, she is survived by her mother and two sisters.

Funeral services probably will be held in Piqua.

D.C. Commissioners Act to Prevent Room Crowding

District Commissioners yesterday acted to enforce regulations against overcrowding in rooms. They also took steps to allow use of outdoor toilets in view of the scarcity of bathroom materials.

Since room overcrowding has been found to exist without knowledge of the proprietor of premises, the Commissioners put the penalty on the person "whose presence causes the over-occupancy." This penalty can amount to as much as $300.

They voted to allow installation of outside toilets even in cases where inside sewer and plumbing connections already exist, since materials for new bathrooms are "exceedingly difficult to obtain." The order requires a toilet for each 10 persons.

For and Against—McCarran Home Rule Bill

Board of Trade Pays Tribute To Dr. Ballou

Dr. Frank W. Ballou, who retired as superintendent of schools for the District of Columbia on October 20, was honored last night at a testimonial dinner given by the Washington Board of Trade in the Mayflower Hotel and attended by close to 500 former associates and District and Government officials and civic leaders.

BALLOU

Replying to the tributes paid him as the founder, 23 years ago, of a public school system "which may serve as a model for the Nation," Dr. Ballou declared that all his efforts had been directed toward an educational system "which recognizes and fosters in its program the dignity and value of human lives."

Such a system, he said, "encourages the maintenance of those political, religious, social, economic, and educational conditions which are able to sustain life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness among a free people."

The public school system "represents sacrifice, faith and the idealism of America," Dr. Ballou declared. And "no other nation in the world has recognized" to the same extent "the importance of universal public education or established any such comprehensive system of public schools."

Poor health had forced his retirement, the educator said, but in the school system he helped establish here he saw "promise of greater things to be."

Paying tribute to the retired school superintendent were Representative George H. Mahon of Texas, Commissioner Guy Mason, Dr. John W. Studebaker, U. S. commissioner of education; Mrs. Henry Grattan Doyle, president of the Board of Education; Robert L. Haycock, superintendent of schools for the District of Columbia, and Sherwood D. Shankland, executive secretary of the American Association of School Administrators. Granville Gude, president of the Washington Board of Trade, introduced the speakers.

Presentation of a huge "grandfather's" clock and a bound volume of testimonials, gifts from the Board of Trade, were made in a ceremony broadcast over Station WWDC.

Young Keeps Busy With Affairs Of Native District Government

By Hanson H. Hathaway

(The second of a series—A primer of District government.)

John Russell Young is president of the District Commission.

There are two other commissioners: Guy Mason and Col. Charles W. Kutz.

The array of responsibilities delegated to Young is impressive. His job calls for contact with some 40 functional officials, with special attention to 17 departments including the Assessor, Auditor, Board of Tax Appeals, Tax Collector, Corporation Counsel, National Capital Housing Authority, Unemployment Compensation, Weights and Measures, Fire, Police, Municipal and Juvenile Courts, Licensing, Real Estate Commisison, Deed Recorder, Register of Wills, and all unassigned matter.

Has Other Interests

Finally, Young is regional director of the Office of Civilian Defense and on the staff of the Commandant of the Washington Military District.

Besides all this he is an interesting personality in his own right.

He was born in Washington on April 2, 1882, and has gathered more honors and titles than an Eagle Scout has badges. Between 1918-20, he was vice president of the League of Republican State Clubs. From 1922 to 1928 he was president of the White House Correspondents' Association.

President Roosevelt appointed him to his present job in April, 1940. He is now serving his second term.

Commissioner Young is a member of the Washington Board of Trade, the Society of Natives, Association of Oldest Inhabitants, Columbia Historical Society, and founder of the J. Russell Young School of Expression. His clubs are the Altalfa, Gridiron, National Press, Overseas Writers, Friendly Sons of St. Patrick and Variety.

More important to the taxpayer than all this, however, is a description of his work.

Close observers have noted that, when the chips are down, Young comes through. When it comes to "lobbying" in Congress for the city he heads, and which he probably knows better than almost any other person in town, his charm often convinces Washington's real rulers.

District Commissioners, you know, have to go to Capitol Hill with their hats in their hands. They have no power to act on their own. Under these circumstances they are chiefly window dressing for congressional action or inaction, failure or success. Young is excellent at window dressing.

As a young reporter at "city hall," he wrote a history of the Metropolitan Police Department. When he became commissioner, he reorganized and "streamlined" the department and brought it to its present efficiency.

Many Conferences

An average workday of the Commissioner was described by Charles Stofberg, Young's special assistant. Lasting from 9 a. m. until about 6 p. m., it consists of a sequence of meetings and conferences.

Three times a week, when they are all in town, the District Commissioners hold meetings at which Young presides. But precisely what goes on is a matter of some mystery.

Seeking the minutes of the meetings of the Board of Commissioners, this reporter was told by Miss Dorothy King, assistant to G. M. Thornett, secretary to the board, that the minutes were a matter of public record but that they were scattered in different places and "it would be some job to get them together for anybody to look at."

Insistence that the minutes be produced seemed to worry Miss King who then declared that she had "no real authority to show them. Perhaps you'd better see Mr. Thornett."

Thornett was out, it developed, as was Ralph Norton, his assistant. Your reporter never did get to see the minutes, but feels they would make interesting reading.

There was but one incident that accompanied intensive research in the District Building. The result is a not-very-satisfactory explanation of the executive life of a $9000-a-year government official.

Msgr. McCormick Is Honored By Catholic U. Faculty, Alumni

McCORMICK

Held on the Feast of the Immaculate Conception, patronal feast of the university and also the day of its fiftyfourth anniversary, the gathering was hailed by numerous speakers not only as an expression of the general appreciation by all friends of the university for the new rector but also as a high tribute and a sign of loyalty to the alma mater by students and teachers alike.

Monsignor McCormick expressed his hope that the dinner be the first in a series of annual gatherings on that day to bring alumni, alumnae, faculty, and friends together.

Letters of esteem for the new rector were sent by the District of Columbia States attorney and graduate of the university.

The Most Rev. John M. McNamara, D. D., Auxiliary Bishop of Baltimore and Washington, said grace.

Greetings in the name of the faculty and clerical alumni were expressed by the Very Rev. Ignatius Smith, O. P., dean of the school of philosophy.

Andrew P. Maloney, national president of the Alumni Association, and Bernard F. Locraft, treasurer, Washington chapter, also spoke.

Monsignor McCormick expressed his appreciation for the tribute paid to him, which he accepted mainly as a tribute to his office and to the university as a whole. He particularly praised the soldiers stationed at the school and the members of the faculty who have worked without vacation to serve the regular student body as well as the Army specialized training program.

Vincent L. Toomey was chairman of the banquet committee.

Four Face Action In Black Market Onion Transaction

The United States Attorney's office authorized prosecution yesterday of three grocers and a clerk charged wtih selling onions at more than the ceiling price set by the Office of Price Administration.

When the warrents issued for the arrest of the four men are returned, the names will be made public.

Laskey said the prosecution stems from an extensive investigation of black marketing of vegetables here.

McCarran Bill Opposed by Trade Board

By Anne Hagner

The McCarran bill, giving Washingtonians the right to vote for a seven-man Board of Commissioners, received its first opposition yesterday at the second session of discussions on local government as Joseph C. McGarraghy, spokesman for the Washington Board of Trade, asserted that his organization considers the present form of local administration "efficient and practical."

The trade group, he said, favors broadening the present powers of the board to eliminate "the necessity of congressional approval for naming streets and laying steam-heating pipes." But, McGarraghy emphasized, its members are steadfastly in favor of general suffrage and representation in Congress.

The Board of Trade's contention, he added, was that no real cross-section of Washington residents would vote because many keep their allegiance to their home States and would be unwilling to surrender national suffrage for the right to participate in a purely local election. There are no accurate figures on how many persons come in this category, he said.

Queried on Membership

"How many members are in your organization?" asked Senator Burton (Republican) of Ohio, who took over the chairmanship temporarily while McCarran paid a brief visit to a meeting of the Appropriations Committee.

"Forty-eight hundred," McGarraghy repliyed. More than half of its membership was represented at a meeting where the resolution deciding on opposition to home rule received its final vote, he said.

Queried by spectators as to the membership of the trade body, McGarraghy explained that it contained no women members, no Negroes but "a good many representatives" of organized labor.

Meanwhile hearings on the McCarran bill and Holman resolutions granting home-rule to District citizens will continue "until every citizen who is interested in the problem has his say," Chairman McCarran of the Senate District Committee announced at the hearing's end.

Urges Attendance

The Nevada Democrat also urged all Washington residents to have no hesitancy in appearing at the public hearings, which will go into a third meeting at 10 a. m. today on Capitol Hill and give every indication of carrying on next week.

In harmony with the provisions of the McCarran bill was Mrs. Eugene Duffield, president of the "voteless" District League of Women Voters, who praised the measure's recognition that "there is a sphere of local policy-making for which Congress can delegate authority to a local council."

"The bill also centralizes the administrative branch of the District Government, making it more efficient so that it can better discharge its present functions as well as additional functions which legislation like the Hebert bills would confer upon it," her statement continued."

(Representative Hebert (Democrat) of Louisiana currently is holding hearings on proposed legislation to widen the Commissioners' powers. He is a member of the House District Committee—Editor's note.)

"We wish to comment particularly on the provision in the McCarran bill for a council-manager form of government which we feel will be both acceptable and useful in Washington," said Mrs. Duffield.

Cites Other Cities' Experiences

"Studies of similar forms of government in other cities have shown that the concentration of authority for administration in the hands of one trained person has generally resulted in a better coordinated government. A city manager with scientific, over-all approach has usually been able to obtain a more smoothly running government, with departments working together with minimum effort to render improved service to the public.

"The league wishes to point out some details which, it feels, weaken the bill. It is felt that the proposal for election of Commissioners on the basis of ward divisions should be modified to allow for a certain number to be elected at large.

"The league also objects to an $8000 salary for each Commissioner as too high . . . and that the city manager should be appointed without term. We question the principle underlying the Federal control of funds, and urges that at the earliest possible moment Congress explore the possibility for giving the District a reasonable amount of control over District revenue.

The Gentler Sex

To the Girls at Home

By Malvina Lindsay

"I have never before seen such courage as these war wives have."

MISS HAZEL CORBIN, director of the New York Maternity Association.

Here's to the war bride who cuts short the greatest of those few high moments of happiness that come into human lives, and sends him away to danger and perhaps death, while she gallantly carries on her lonely and uncompleted existence in office, factory, hospital, WACS, WAVES or wherever she will be busiest and wherever she will be needed most.

Here's to the expectant war mother who, without whimper or self-pity, and only with courage and a sense of challenge and high hope, faces alone the ordeal ahead of her; who calmly dares in a time of uncertainity and insecurity to bring a life into the world and accept the responsibility for its development; who often must carry on the process of creating life under the shadow of anxiety and bereavement, and who is a chaotic, menacing world unhesitatingly stakes her all on a better future.

Here's to the war wife who suddenly finds her safe little world turned topsy-turvy and insecure and who, whether young or not so young, financially secure or insecure, spurns the helpless - little - woman - left - behind role and strikes out on her own to meet her responsibilities; who cheerfully and efficiently becomes the man of the house, the father as well as the mother of her children, a contributor to the home front, a soldier in her own right.

Here's to the mother whose every hour is clouded with anxiety, and who doesn't let the world know it, or depress her family with her own subconscious fear or self-pity; who writes letters of good cheer and gayety to absent sons and daughters at camp or the battle front; who rediscovers every day the truth of the old maxim, "Work is kind"; who wins victories daily in her own soul and thus grows in stature and becomes a rock and an inspiration to all about her.

Here's to the sisters and aunts and grandmothers and girl friends who write and write and write; who make cookies and cakes and continually send "little things" and surprise packages; who carry continually with them the thoughts and memories of absent men; who never let down a moment in their stalwart hope and belief that all is going well over there; who feel the obligation to sew and roll bandages and serve at canteens and buy bonds and give, give, give of themselves over here.

Here's to those who have been bereft; who have had the shock of telegrams that read "missing" or "mortally wounded" in action; who have felt the earth suddenly cut out from under them and all the future turned into a black fog; yet who have rallied and found their way and carried on; who have not despondently retreated into yesterday but have bravely surrendered to the onrush and needs of today and tomorrow.

Here's to those who having no one near to them in danger, and knowing personally no tragedy of war other than scarcities and inconveniences, have not remained calloused and apart, nor exponents of life as usual; but who have had hearts big enough to suffer for neighbors, friends and humanity; who have freely given of themselves, their time, their labor, their money, their blood, their thought and their prayers to lessen the suffering of their fellow beings and to make less certain its repetition.

POST DISCOVERIES

The Dress—

The dress is just one of those things you see on a hanger and there is absolutely nothing about it that's startling. Nothing about it is gasp producing—yet as you look at it, your reaction is, "That's a good dress!" We are able to do since we walk around and look at clothes all the time, yet it is difficult to describe for you what makes it such a good dress.

We believe the answer is because it looks simple, it looks comfortable, it looks easy to wear, it looks like the kind of dress that belongs to you as soon as you have tried it on. It is cut without any monkey business. There's not a drape or shirring or even a tiny bit of ornamentation. Of course, that in itself is newsworthy.

Somehow it is more than just a shirtwaist—it's not as severe or tailored or as definitely marked "efficient" as are most shirtwaist dresses. It's a fine basic dress to live in, to work in; it's good at any price, and we could hardly believe we had found it for around $13. It's 60 per cent wool and comes in a gray and white or tan and white pincheck.

We picked both of these for their value, for their style and for their undated look. Both will last for many seasons and that is something to look for in clothes these days.

Please call NAtional 4200 Extension 324 between 9 a. m. and 5:30 and we'll tell you where to find these.

The Suit—

Do you need a new suit? If the one you own is getting too shabby to wear, we suggest you have a look at a suit such as the one we have sketched. It has a great deal to recommend it.

First, it's soft, and although it has the compensations you usually find in a suit, it adds the more feminine touches of a dress. Since it is unlined, it's fine to wear under your winter coat and dandy to wear on into spring.

What is meant by a soft suit? The answers to that are many. A suit can be made soft by its dressmaker details or by the choice of fabrics that are less mannish and less severe than the ones you find in tailored clothes. Softness can also be achieved through colors—pretty flattering colors that are good for your soul.

That's why we picked this suit. It combines all of the features just described. It's body lines are cut so that they do the most for your figure and yet the tailoring is such it will stand all the hard wear suits have to take.

The skirt has a pleated front, and the slight flare to the back has just the right amount of swing to allow for those businesslike strides you're taking these days. The fabric is 100 per cent wool and feels and looks expensive.

We were amazed at the perfectly wonderful range of becoming pastel shades this suit comes in—and also black and brown. When you can get all that for around $18, we think it's a find!

Alumnae to Celebrate Founders' Day

Fifty-five years ago on December 12, Beta Sigma Omicron was founded at Columbia, Mo. Saturday night at 7:45 members of the local alumnae chapter headed by its president, Mrs. Charles Edwin Barton, will hold a banquet to commemorate the occasion, at Barnharts, 5510 Connecticut ave.

The traditional Founders' Day ceremony will once more renew the obligations of each Beta with each other and with those with whom they come in contact. Several members of the local chapter are serving with the armed forces and will not be able to attend. However, it is hoped that any newcoming Betas in Washington will attend the meeting. They may make reservations by either calling the President at Emerson 5919 or Barnharts directly.

At this meeting the president, who is historian for the local chapter, will present to the chapter a red morocco-bound history of the local chapter from its founding in 1932 to the present. Mattie Richards Tyler, associate editor of the Blue Moon Poetry Magazine and National Beta Sigma Omicron poet-laureate, will read a number of her poems.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Rigidly Self Righteous in His Scorn of Women, Man Intends to Marry, Even So; His Sister Sees Grief Ahead for Two, Unless He Changes

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: This is a most unusual problem, and I am afraid there will be a lot of unhappiness in two persons' lives before long, unless something is done about it. The problem is my brother. He is a misogynist, now in his late twenties, and old enough to have outgrown such foolishness. When barely out of his teens, he fell in love with a woman, whose memory he professes to cherish as the incomparable ideal. And he says now that when he marries, he will tell his wife that she is strictly second-best and makeshift; and that he can never love anyone as he loves this memory.

The truth is, he won't LET himself love anyone else. Yet the awful part of it is, he intends to marry;—and it will be a marriage (for his wife) without love, understanding or kindness. He will never lie to her, nor strike her, nor be unfaithful. Oh, no! He will just destroy her with bitter, scathing criticism and treat her as someone with little or no intellect,—as a poor substitute for his ideal, the woman he thinks he should have had,—and assume that she should be thankful for his thorny virtues and the poor crumbs of affection he may deign to give her.

His sulky disposition may be partly due to the fact that he still lives with his family and is waited on hand and foot by our mother, who spoils all of us. He has made an absolute fetish of "truth;"—and truth, to him, means saying unkind and unnecessary things to, or about, people, that are better left unsaid. For instance, if he asks a girl to go out with him, and for some reason she declines; and, to spare his feelings, says she has a headache, and he later learns that this was, in the strictest sense, untrue, he charges the girl has "lied" to him; and committed a grievous sin!

He loves to tear others down (calling it "truth"), merely to build himself up; which of course makes him unpopular. He doesn't seem to consider praise as truth; only criticism is truth. He criticizes everyone under the guise of trying to help them. His methods of "improving" me, when I was growing up, almost warped my personality to such a degree that I was ashamed to show my face in public! His father, his other sister and I, and several close friends have tried desperately to make him see the light; but he is adamant in his self righteousness, and insists that everyone else is practically moronic. All this stems, I believe, from a hidden feeling of unsureness and lack of self confidence.

What can we do? Or should we do anything? He won't see a psychiatrist. Those who need to seldom do. E. M. S.

Ugly Conduct Stems From Self Contempt

DEAR E. M. S.: You have put your finger on the sore spot in your brother's personality, by saying that his hostile arrogance toward people in general, and his aggressive disparagement of women in particular, stems from a subconscious feeling of self contempt. His systematic attempts to build himself up in his own and his hearers' estimation, by scornfully devaluating everyone else (except his vanished Dream Woman: whose alleged incomparable virtues probably have no existence except in his fantasy), is a commonplace neurotic behavior-mechanism. It signifies that the chronic growler has a very low opinion of himself and reads others in terms of it, since, as one philosopher has said, "We impute to others the qualities we possess ourselves."

I have a hunch that your brother's bitter self contempt, giving rise to his proclamation of dour intent to notify his wife, whoever she may be, that she is strictly second-best and makeshift, and that he can never love her, or anyone else, as he loves his fond memory of The First Woman,—I have a hunch that all this has to do with an innermost fear that marriage will find him sexually impotent (due to psychic causes, which psychiatric re-education alone could help him understand and overcome); and that he has already seized on the face-saving explanation for his intuitively anticipated, neurotic lack of virility: the explanation, namely, that no other woman has the "appeal" to him that his True Love would have!

Self Righteousness Is Accursed Attitude

IT IS PROBABLE that your mother has witlessly "spoiled" him for marriage,—though not irreparably, if he has the brains and initiative to undo the damage,—not only by waiting on him hand and foot, and thus perhaps fixing his affections on her at an infantile level, in an Oedipus complex; but also by indoctrinating him with morbidly false concepts of sex, sin and virtue, so as to keep him her "good boy." I say: witlessly spoiled him. Because her intentions would be of the best, all the while her misguided approach to her objective was having the most regrettable effects upon himself, as plainly has happened. And, by the way, his obsession with "truth," employed as ammunition to riddle the ego of others, suggests that "truth" has, for him, the most dread and ugly connotations;—the truth about himself as he senses it, I mean.

As for how you might help him,—The fact is, you can't, so long as he continues rigidly self-righteous in his rejection of help, and in his refusal to concede his need of a revolutionary change of heart and viewpoint. It is a spiritual axiom that the Lord helps those who help themselves; and a spiritual truism (as all metaphysical teachers agree) that self righteousness is an accursed attitude. If, however, he were to be confronted with this objective estimate of his neurotic predicament, coming from a thoroughly disinterested source, it just might jar him into a more receptive state of mind; and in that instant, he would have taken the first faltering step toward psychological redemption; and the pathway to happiness would gradually thereafter open before him, as he undertook with grace of purpose to find it. M. H.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write her in care of The Post Woman's Page.

Gifts for Sick; Dinner for WACS Planned by Church Council Women

By Genevieve Reynolds

Take an empty oat meal box. Cover it with Christmas cards. Make matching handle with cotton knitting yarn. Result—an artistic container for Yuletide cheer. This week Mrs. S. D. Collins, chairman of the National City Christian Church's Social Service Committee, exhibited hundreds of these to members of the Washington Council of Church Women, sponsors of the project.

GENEVIEVE REYNOLDS

A present for every patient in Gallinger, Freedmen's, Glenn Dale and Children's hospitals is the aim of the council. Dubbed Christmas cheer boxes, the children get a number of small articles such as a doll, book, trinkets, hair ribbon, games, one clothing garment, hard candy, a few cookies. Boxes are wrapped securely, marked on the outside—for a girl 3, a boy 14, as the case may be.

For young people and adults a cheerful book, some stationery, game, handkerchiefs, trinkets, warm socks or stockings, bedroom slippers. More and more of these Christmas cheer boxes are needed. If you haven't time to fill one and send it to the Washington Federation of Churches, 1751 N st. nw., mail a check instead.

In addition to the hospital patients the Council of Church Women has 1500 children of families of the Juvenile Court who need help. These families are still living on a submarginal basis and are not able to provide Christmas for their children.

Come Christmas day, the Council would like to see WACS, WAVES, SPARS in a private home for dinner. There are 300 WACS, newcomers to the city, who should be invited for turkey that day. On New Year's day the council will provide food and drinks for 700 service men and women. Mrs. Theodore Wedel, wife of Canon Wedel of the Washington Cathedral is chairman of the entertainment committee as well as chairman of the council's Community Relations Committee. She suggests that if you can invite the service women in for an old-fashioned Christmas gathering, do so in pairs rather than in ones.

Approximately 25 different Protestant denominations are participating in the council's project, which is an annual event. Climaxing the project will be a program of carols in every Washington alley on Christmas eve.

Miss Etta Mai Russell, executive secretary of the council, and Mrs. Joy Elmer Morgan, president, emphasized the need for more gifts and money. What can you do about it?

Out-of-Town Guests Honored At Informal Afternoon Fete

Argentine Naval Attache aud Senora De Brunet Entertain for Mme Landowska

One of the pleasantly informal and gala fetes of yesterday afternoon was the one at which the Naval Attache at the Argentine Embassy and Senora de Brunet entertained.

The "after 5:30" party honored a current visitor in town, Mme. Wanda Landowska, noted harpischordist, who was heard Tuesday night at the Chamber Music Guild's concert. Sharing honors with Mme. Landowska was Mrs. O'Donnell Hoover of New York, who has been the house guest of Senora de Brunet this week end left following the party for Manhattan.

Baskets of gold autumn blossoms decorated the Woodley rd. residence of Captain and Senora de Brunet, who presented guests to Mme. Landowska and Mrs. Hoover at the entrance to the drawing room. Attractive buffet tables were centered in the dining room, where the several score guests lingered until 7 o'clock or later.

Two Guests Share Honor at Party

Invited to meet the honor guests were the Chief Justice and Mrs. Harlan F. Stone and several ranking members of the diplomatic corps.

Among those in attendance were the Chilean Ambassador and Senora de Michels and their daughter, Miss Cristina Michels, the Polish Ambassador and Mme. Ciechanowska, the Ambassador of Yugoslavia and Mme. Fotitch, and the Greek Ambassador and Mme. Diamantopoulos.

The Charge d'Affaires at the Argentine Embassy, Rodolfo Garcia Arias, was an early arrival, as were Baron Herve de Gruben, serving in the same post at the Belgian Embassy, and Baroness de Gruben.

Embassy Attaches In Attendance

Also in the company were the Polish Minister Plenipotentiary and Mme. Kwapisewska, and the Counselor of the Netherlands Embassy and Baroness Boetzelaer. Still others there included the Minister Counselor' at the Canadian Embassy and Mrs. L. B. Pearson.

Several of the air, naval and military attaches from various embassy and legation staffs were present. Among them were Col. Wlodzimierz Onacewicz, Polish Military Attache; Capt. Tadeuza P. Morgenstern, and Lieut. Col. Zygmunt Wojeichowski, Naval and Air Attaches, respectively, at the Polish Embassy.

Yet other guests who attended were Col. and Mrs. Robert Guggenheim, Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Woodward, Mr. and Mrs. Harold Coolidge and Mr. and Mrs. Marshall Dierssen.

Admiral Reid Of Canada Joins Staff

Another distinguished chieftain has joined the ever-growing ranks of international military men in the Capital.

He is Rear Admiral Howard Emerson Reid, Royal Canadian Navy, who comes to Washington as naval member of the combined staffs. Admiral Reid takes over his post here after an extensive period of active duty with the Canadian Navy, his last assignment having been that of flag officer for the Newfoundland Force.

Admiral Reid was born at Portage du Fort, Quebec, and received his early education at Ashbury College, Ottawa. Following his graduation from the Royal Naval College of Canada in 1913, he saw action in the First World War.

After several years of service in various branches of the Canadian navy, the admiral was appointed commander in charge at Halifax in 1933, and the next year was named director of operations and training at naval service headquarters in Ottawa. Five years later he was appointed commanding officer Atlantic Coast and the following year was appointed deputy chief of naval staff and Canadian Naval member of the Canada-United States Joint Board on Defense.

Admiral Reid has only recently arrived to take up residence in Washington and will be joined shortly by his wife and daughter and son who at present are in Ottawa.

Iranian Government to Have New Headquarters Here; Purchases Alanson B. Houghton Home; May Be Raised to Embassy Status Soon

WHILE THE EYES of the world have been turned on Teheran, ancient capital of Iran, the Minister of Iran in Washington, Mohammed Shayesteh, has been quietly negotiating a plan that will increase his country's prestige in Washington.

Specifically, he has completed a deal whereby Iran will have as its American headquarters one of the loveliest residences in this Nation's Capital—the Alanson B. Houghton home at 3003 Massachusetts avenue. On the market for some time, at a price of $220,000 the estate became the property of Iran just the other day. But Minister Shayesteh and members of his staff are not planning to move at once. "It will probably take us three or four months to get over there," said First Secretary H. Hadjeb-Davallou, when I talked to him yesterday.

Meanwhile, the house at 2315 Massachusetts avenue, which has housed the Iranian Legation since 1939, when full, friendly diplomatic relations were restored between the United States and Iran, is on the market again. It belongs to Mrs. Malcolm McConihe and James O'Donnell . . . and chances are, it will be dabbed up soon.

THE HOME BUILT BY the late Alanson B. Houghton, one-time Ambassador to Germany and later to Great Britain, is a handsome Georgian structure, flanked by extensive gardens and approached by a semi-circular driveway. Although not so impressive as the British Embassy—the largest foreign diplomatic establishment in Washington located on up the street at 3100 Massachusetts avenue—the new Iranian Legation compares favorably with it. Furthermore, the Iranian home boasts a few stunning features that cannot be claimed by the Queen Anne mansion that is Great Britain's Washington home. The Houghton house was built entirely of mellow old bricks, taken for the most part from Clouds Mill, near Alexandria, and dating to 1785. Standing on a triangular lot which measures 260 feet on the Massachusetts avenue building line and 220 feet on Thirtieth street, the mansion features a central block, having a frontage of 75 feet and two wings, which bring the total length to 135 feet.

Terraces hedged by English box, picturesque paths between bright flower beds and neatly manicured grass plots characterize the grounds which were landscaped by Miss Rose Greely. The house, with its spacious rooms, plaster paneled walls with elaborate cornice ornamentation, and its graceful, sweeping stairway, was built by H. A. McQuary from plans drawn by Frederick H. Brooke, architect.

THE PURCHASE of the Houghton home by the Government of Iran marks another chapter in the history of United States - Iranian relations — a chronicle accented with several hectic interludes, one of which threatened, dramatically, to finish off the history entirely back in 1935.

Washingtonians have almost forgotten the teapot tempest stirred up here by a sensational incident that came to be known as "L'Affaire Elkton," but it resulted in the complete disruption of diplomatic give-and-take between Washington and Teheran for more than three years. In case you've forgotten, "L'Affaire Elkton" centered around the then Iranian Minister Ghaffer Djalal, who was arrested one Thanksgiving Eve for speeding through the wide, shady streets of Elkton, Md. He claimed diplomatic immunity, but somehow the officers of the law didn't understand, and they snapped a pair of handcuffs on him even though he protested—loudly. Subsequently he reaped a harvest of apologies ranging all the way from the local authorities to the Governo: of Maryland, and even up to Secretary of State Cordell Hull.

But by that time too much damage was done. Reports flew to the Shah of Iran that his envoy in Washington had been mistreated, and in less time than it takes to tell the entire story, Minister Djalal was recalled and the Legation of Iran was closed . . . until 1939.

THERE WERE THOSE in Washington who remembered even then, however, that the departure of the Iranian Minister had been merely a climax for another—and more tragic — incident between the United States Government and that of Iran many years before. They recalled, with horror, that our vice consul at Teheran, Maj. Robert W. Imbrie, was killed in a mob riot in the Persian capital; and that the United States insisted on:

An official apology from Iran.

The execution of three soldiers present during the rioting.

A guard of honor headed by two generals to accompany the body as it was transported to the seacoast and a salute of 11 guns when Maj. Imbrie's body was borne away.

Iran intimated at the time that the United States was "putting on the screws" with its demands, but they were complied with . . . and the matter was dropped to all intents and diplomatic purposes.

Shortly before diplomatic relations between this country and Iran were resumed in 1939, Wallace Murray, chief of the State Department's Division of Far Eastern Affairs, visited in Teheran, and it was believed that he then laid the groundwork for the reestablishment of friendship and cooperation between the two countries.

SENT HERE to reopen the Legation was Dr. Ali Akbar Daftary, who had been serving as counselor of the Iranian Court of Cassation, a position corresponding to that of a justice of the United States Supreme Court. And a few months later, along came the present Minister, Mohammed Shayesteh, who presented his credentials in February, 1940.

Several months ago, however, reports from Teheran said that the Iranian Shah had appointed Mohammed Ali Foroughi as his Ambassador to Washington; that the new envoy would come here just as soon as transportation could be arranged; and that upon his arrival, another Embassy would be added to the Diplomatic Corps in Washington.

Perhaps the purchase of a new home in Washington portends the raising of Iran's diplomatic status here, soon. But it is hoped that even if there is a new Iranian Ambassador here, the present Minister will stay on. In the past two years, he and his attractive wife have made a host of friends . . . for themselves, and for Iran.

Mrs. Norman Entertains For Visitor

Parties centering around Mrs. William Fahnestock, who was Miss Eppes Hawes, daughter of former Senator and Mrs. Harry Hawes, included a "swing evening" given by Mrs. Dorothy Clark Norman last night in her home in Georgetown. Mrs. Fahnestock is at the Mayflower until tomorrow when she will return to her home on the Eastern Shore, but she's promising her friends she'll be back again after Christmas. Mrs. Fahnestock dined with the Minister of Denmark and Mme. de Kauffmann on Tuesday evening, and this afternoon she will have a few friends in for cocktails at the Mayflower.

Music by C. Luckyeth Roberts, who has given such favorites as "Railroad Blues" and "Moonlight Cocktails" to devotees of "swing," was a feature of the the evening, and Mrs. Norman, who is an accomplished pianist, also gave a short program of the classics with a bit of modern music interspersed. The latter technique Mrs. Norman learned from Mr. Roberts, an old friend.

Dinner, buffet fashion, preceded the music, and a number of guests dropped in later in the evening. Among those at the party were Lieut. and Mrs. Hugh D. Auchincloss, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Dere Weiman, Mr. and Mrs. Josiah Marvel, Maj. Charles Baskerville, Col. Alfred O. Hoyt, Col. Walter Donald, Edward Gardner, Maj. and Mrs. Bradley Geist, Mr. and Mrs. George Garrett, Miss Sue Rosenberg, Mrs. William Doeller, Mrs. Noyes Lewis, Maj. and Mrs. Jasper DuBose, Col. and Mrs. Edward Johnson, Stewart Macdonald, Mrs. Emmons Smith, Col. Gordon Baird and Col. Walter Pew.

Mr., Mrs. W. S. B. Lacy Entertain at Dinner

Mr. and Mrs. W. S. B. Lacy entertained at dinner last evening, having as guests Mr. and Mrs. Robert Stewart, Mrs. J. P. Summerscale, wife of the Commerical Secretary of the British Embassy; Mme. Lombard, wife of General Lombard, now overseas; Count Tarnowski, and Rafal Lepkowski, First Secretary of the Polish Embassy.

Join Up for Work At Walter Reed

Added to the services of the American Women's Hospital Reserve Corps in the war effort is special duty at Walter Reed Hospital with a group assisting in the preparation of hospital supplies each Tuesday from 9 to 12 o'clock. In dire need of extra help, Mrs. Norman Kirk, wife of the surgeon general of the Army, called upon this group of volunteers for aid.

Members of the corps who have not yet registered for hospital service are asked to communicate with the corps headquarters without delay and list their names as being available for this special work.

Concerts to Be Revived in Alexandria

Thursday evening, January 13, has been set as the opening date for the Gadsby's Tavern Candlelight Concert series which is being revived in Alexandria this winter. The concerts, which highlighted the 1940-41 season, are being sponsored by William Robert Adam, music patron, of Alexandria, who has been serving in the Army for the last two years.

Pvt. Vincent Burns, USMC, now stationed at the Marine Barracks in Washington, will be the piano soloist for the evening. The coming musicale will mark the young Marine's debut in Alexandria as a solo recitalist.

A talented concert artist, Private Burns is from Providence, R. I., and studied under several master musicians. He also had further study at the New England Conservatory of Music.

Presented in the historic room in which Gen. George Washington attended the only two public celebrations of his birthday, the concerts take on much of the air of the recent musicales given in the Governor's Palace at colonial Williamsburg. During the performances the historic rooms of Gadsby's are illuminated entirely by candlelight and crackling log fires.

As pointed out by Mr. Adam, chamber music of eighteenth century composers with distinguished instrumentalists, has always been one of the unique features of the series which in the past has presented Alexandria artists as well as a number from the National Symphony in Washington and New York music schools.

In addition, contemporary composers have been introduced with much success, as in the case of Richard Horner Bales, young Alexandria composer, who directed the performance of his own work.

Mr. Adam, after two years of Army duty, was honorably discharged this summer due to physical disability and is now in the Public Relations Bureau of the War Department.

Stage Door Canteen to Be Open for Art Exhibit

The American Theater Wing's Stage Door Canteen at the Shubert Belasco Theater is working hard these days preparing for the Grand Opening on Wednesday afternoon, December 29, of a unique art exhibit featuring portraits of sailors, soldiers and marines, made at the Stage Door Canteen by distinguished artists who have volunteered their time and talents to help entertain our boys in uniform while on leave.

Most of the boys who have posed for their portraits at the Canteen are now overseas. Some are in the Pacific theater, some in Italy or North Africa, and some have been reported "missing in action." The sketches made at the Canteen are suitably mounted and framed and mailed to mothers, wives or sweethearts. About 96 per cent go to mothers, and the letters of appreciation they have written to the artists have more than repaid the work required to keep this activity of the Canteen up to high standards.

The first exhibit will be open for inspection every week day afternoon from December 29 to January 5. Sunday afternoons and all nights are, of course, devoted exclusively to the entertainment of members of the Allied armed forces.

Admission will be on a donation fee basis. Under the "barter" plan, anyone who wishes to inspect the Canteen, and at the same time see its first art display will be asked to contribute approximately a dollar's value of articles needed for the sale that are served our boys in uniform at the Canteen. Only seven items, however will be acceptable: candy, pickles, olives, potatoes, canned soups, canned milk and home-made cookies. Anyone who prefers may substitute a dollar in cash. Money so realized will go toward buying food.

Washingtonians, who have not been inside of the Belasco Theater since the era of Maude Adams, Otis Skinner, John Drew Henry Miller, and various other famous stars will find some striking changes in the interior of this historic playhouse on December 29, when it will be converted temporarily into an art gallery by day and a Canteen at night.

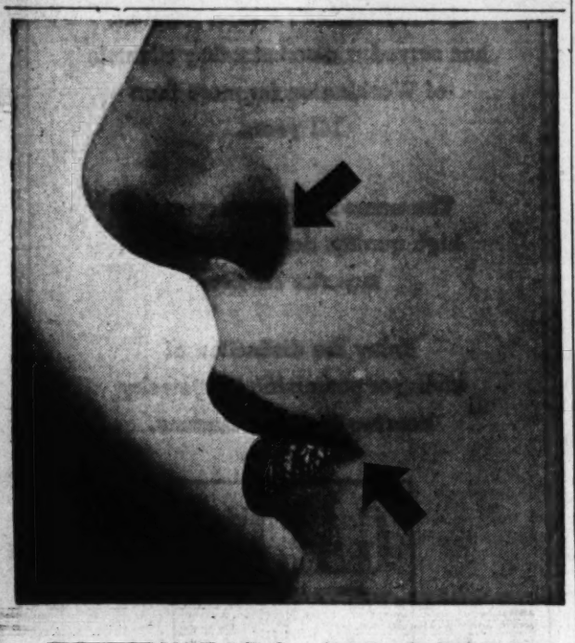
Lady Dill on Speaking Tour

Off once more on another of her frequent jaunts for the National Red Cross, is versatile Lady Dill, wife of Field Marshal Sir John Dill.

Lady Dill, who has been speaking extensively before women's organizations since her return from England last summer, is being heard this week by several such groups in northern New Jersey. Last night she addressed members of the Junior League of Englewood at the Englewood Field Club and tonight she will give a talk in Plainfield. Her topic, during this particular tour, has to do with work being done by the Red Cross in England's service camps.



BLACKHEADS, BIG PORES
"Danger Zones" of your skin!

Read how my 4-Purpose Face Cream keeps your skin crystal-clean and fresh—and guards against these skin troubles.

NO one needs to tell you that there are "danger zones" of the skin. You know! For your own mirror has warned you about them, many times.

You know, for example, that the curve next to your nose—the tiny valleys of your chin—are two zones that must be watched. For there's where skin troubles get their start, and make swift headway.

In the curve beside your nose, pores often become bigger and bigger—until they look conspicuous and coarse. Around your mouth and chin, dirt and grease tend to accumulate and harden into blackheads.

But you can be sure you won't have any of these skin troubles, if you use Lady Esther 4-Purpose Face Cream! For it guards these two danger zones, guards all the danger zones of your skin!

My cream is complete itself—asks no help of other creams or lotions. It keeps your skin looking its freshest and loveliest at all times.

Each time you apply Lady Esther Face Cream it does these 4 vital things: (1) It thoroughly cleans your skin. (2) It softens your skin, loosens and absorbs the dry, clinging flakes. (3) It helps nature refine the pores. (4) It leaves a smooth perfect base for powder.

Yes, my one face cream does all these four essential things for the beauty of your skin. Try it—it's the only cream you need!

Lying Proof—In Your Own Mirror!

Why choose a face cream because it's expensive, or because of a clever package? Judge it only by what it does for your skin!

That's why I say—try Lady Esther 4-Purpose Face Cream! Get the smallest size jar if you like—but try it! When you see how radiantly clean and fresh your skin looks after the very first application—when you see how much smoother and more youthful it appears—it's time enough to get the largest and most economical size. But for living proof that this is the most beautifying cream you have ever used, get the small-size jar of Lady Esther 4-Purpose Face Cream today!

AT CHRISTMAS TIME THE HECHT CO. JOINS WITH ALL MOTHERS, SONS AND DAUGHTERS . . . IN SAYING . . .

"We trim the tree on Christmas night
And trim the house with holly bright.
But good old dad, he gets trimmed first
And what is more he gets trimmed worst.
But still he never says a word . . .
So here's to Dad . . . a game old bird."

Certainly you're not going to forget him, we know that! There will be the usual pile of shirts for Dad . . . and a new batch of ties . . . and socks . . . that subscription to his favorite magazine. Surely no family is going to forget Dad on Christmas Day.

As for Dad himself . . . he's up to his neck in plans for you. He's already slipped Mother an extra twenty dollar bill, so Sis can get that super-duper raincoat she's been wanting. And he put an extra fiver in Bud's wallet, so the shock won't be too great for the lad when he goes to buy Mother that pocketbook she wants. 'Cause he wants his family to have all the things they want . . . especially at Christmas.

Which brings us to our point. He's so concerned with how the family looks . . . he rarely thinks of himself. True he sometimes remembers the day when he could walk in and get a new suit or topcoat, just like that . . . 'cause he had nobody but himself to think about. But he wouldn't do it now. And . . . you can't very well do it for him. A man's got to pick out his own clothes . . . the family can't buy them for him.

But there's one thing you can do: You can just slip him a hint that while he's so concerned with you . . . and what you're getting . . . you feel he deserves some consideration himself. You feel that he's not only entitled to . . . but warrants getting himself a bit dolled up for Christmas too. Just because he's a family man is no reason he should stint himself.

Tell him to come down now to The Hecht Co. Modern Man's Store and blow himself to that overcoat he admired the other day. To shoot the works if he wants, and get a suit AND coat. Tell him now he owes it not only to himself, but to you too, to let the world know his family wants him to have just as much as they. Not a bad idea? . . . that's our opinion . . . and The Hecht Co. Man's Store will back us both up.

So . . . here's the point . . . tell him this morning to run—not walk . . . to the nearest entrance to The Hecht Co. Man's Store—Second Floor, E St. Bldg.
